Bellefonte Republican.

VOL. XXIII BELLEFONTE, PA., THURSDAY MORNING. AUGUST 6, 1891. NO. 32.

Established in 1869. "Let us see to it that a Government, of the People, for the People, and by the People, shall not perish from the Earth."---A. LINCOLN. Terms: $1.50 per Year

Charles A. Dana evidently doesn't regard Cleveland as "in it" whatever the rest of the democratic party may think about it.

The democratic nominees for governor of Ohio and Iowa are both trying to straddle the silver plank in the democratic platform; but come to think of it, that is nothing new Democratic canidates have always done the same thing.

The deadly railroad pass is getting in its fine work on the Alliance officials of some of the Southern State, who are in theory opposed to the railroads, but in practice do not object to making use of free passes from them to travel with.

The New York Sun favors the annexation of Cuba, and Sun is by no means alone. That Cuba will sooner or later become the property of the United States we have always believed. The only question to be determined is to how to acquire it.

The income of the Ohio democratic platform was in the language of its author, Hon. G. W. Houk, of votes Mr. Houk will probably discover in the near future that Ohio farmers are not so green as he and his democratic colleagues suppose to be.

New Yorkers are again discussing ways and means of raising the money to build the Grant monument. Did it ever occur to these gentlemen, many of whom are wealthy, that the quickest way to raise the money would be to contribute it themselves.

The underhanded attacks made upon Mr. Blaine by misrepresenting his health have proven to be boomerangs in more than one sense. Experience is the only thing that will teach some people, the fellow who once picks up a piece of white hot iron will hardly repeat the experiment willingly.

Mr. Grover Cleveland isn't to make any speeches in the Ohio campaign this year; not if he knows himself and he thinks he does. This will be a great disappointment to the republicans, as the presence of the king of the free traders in Ohio would have added a thousand or two to McKinley's majority.

We have been asked if this paper has a candidate for the Presidency. We have no hesitation in saying it has. Our choice is the man upon whom a majority of the delegates to the next national convention shall agree as the proper man to lead the party to victory. We trust that this explanation is sufficiently explicit.

The Italian government in declining to take any official part in our Columbian Exposition is only carrying out the policy it has followed for some years in regard to international expositions, but it does not follow that Italy will be unrepresented at the big show. The Italian government has already let it be understood that it will do all that it can to encourage its citizens to make private exhibits and present indications are that Italian interests will be largely represented at the fair.

Secretary Foster deserves credit for having refused to allow the sons of two prominent Treasury department officials to be appointed private secretaries to their fathers. The practice among officials of placing members of their immediate families upon the Government pay rolls is at best a bad one, and should be entirely abolished as far as republicans are concerned. It has been the cause of more than one scandal. We tip our hat to the man who dares to do right even though he thereby offends some of his friends.

Oh yes, the McKinley tariff law is destroying our foreign commerce, and this is the way it is doing it: A statement recently issued by the Bureau of Statistics of the Treasury department shows that our foreign commerce for the fiscal year ending June 30, was the largest in our history, amounting to $1,729,330,896; it also shows that under the first nine months of the McKinley tariff law we imported merchandise to the value of $630,206,005, while for the same period in the year before our imports amounted to only $598,769,905; also that under the McKinley law the goods admitted free of duty amounted to $295,963,665 against $208,983,873 for the same period in the year before. How the democratic lies by which they secured control of the House of Representatives last year are going home to roost.

—And still complaints are brought to council of the inefficiency of the borough police and the turning off of the lights at twelve o'clock. In the first place, persons should remember that there is only one policeman on at night and it is impossible for him to be all places at one time. In the second instance the tax payers should remember that they are paying about $2,000 a year for light only till midnight.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[Our Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, July 3, 1891.

Secretary Foster will this week go to Ohio for a short vacation if nothing unexpected turns up to keep him here. Notwithstanding his announced determination at the time he entered the cabinet not to follow the example of his illustrious predecessor and work himself to death, the work and responsibility of being at the head of our financial system is gradually wearing the flesh from his rotuned figure. The fact of the matter is that as at present constituted there is too much work connected with the Treasury department for any one man to attempt to direct unless he has a constitution that can stand obout twenty hours work a day; there are several important bureaux such as the Revenue, Marine, Light House, Life Saving Internal Revenue, and Engraving and Printing now under that department that the Secretary of the Treasury should be releived of in order that he might devote his entire attention to strictly financial matters. There is no sense in killing more good men before making the change, and there is little doubt that overwork in that office killed secretaries Folger, Manning and Windom within rhe last ten years.

The rumor fiend has evidently had resignations on the brain for the last three or four days, and among those that he has caused to resign may be mentioned Secretary Noble, Attorney-General Miller, Postmaster Wanamaker, Treasurer Nebeker, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Nettleton and Commissioner of pension Raum. Not one of these gentlemen has resigned or has the least intention of resigning so far as those who are in positions to know have any information; but the rumors go on just the same. It is safe to refuse to believe that any official intends resigning until it is officially stated, or is given out by the offiicial himself or some one with authority to speak for him.

Ex-Representative Simonds, of Connecticut, the new Commissioner of Patents, assumed control of that office on Saturday.

Secretary Tracy has gone to Bar Harbor where he will spend the rest of the Summer.

Secretary Proctor will attend the G. A. R. encampment at Detroit.

Indian Commissioner Morgan will spend his vacation in Europe. The controversy which has existed between his office and the Catholic bureau of missions has ended satisfactory to all concerned. Deputy Commissioner Belt, who is in charge during the Commissioner's absence, said on the subject: "There is a perfect understanding between Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop Ireland, and Commissioner Morgan, and the outcome of the interview between the last two named was the establishing of the most cordial relations. There seemed to be an idea existing that Commissioner Morgan was opposed to the Catholic Church and its schools, when this was not the case, as was evidenced by the work of this department. The objection on the part of the Commissioner was the interference of the Catholic Mission bureau which attempted to control and guide this department in the transaction of its business. Mr Morgan showed Bishop Ireland that instead of decreasing the allowance to the Catholic Indian schools it had been increased $40,000; that instead of being antagonistic to Catholic schools he was extremely friendly toward them, but preferred to deal with them direct rather than through the Bureau of Missions. There is no trouble between the Commissioner and the Catholics. Both sides have been discussed and both parties are satisfied and the work will proceed without friction, looking solely to the education and advancement of the Indian youth."

Eleven hundred clerks were dismissed from the Census Office last Friday because the work upon which they were engaged had been completed. Another big discharge will take place this month for the same reason.

Although it had been known for some time the official promulgated of the reciprocity agreements with Spain, affecting the the trade of Cuba and Porto Rico, the temporary schedule of which goes into effect September 1, and the permanent schedule July 1, 1892, and with San Domingo was joyfully received. They are certainly very desirable agreements for the inferests of the United States particularly those of Agriculture and manufactures and together with the others gone before and to come, they will make thousands of new rriends for the party which has given the country the boom of reciprocity without injury to a single American interest, thus differing radically from the democratic idea, which is to break down the home market by destroying home manufactures and letting in free of duty the manufactures of Europe without getting additional markets for our products.

The Best Party.

Ex-Senator Ingalls recently defined his political attitude in the following language:

I am, as I have been from the birth of the party, a republican. It is not a perfect political organization, but it is the best there is, or has been, or will be till the sheep and the goats are separated at the last day. It has had some bad men, but it is recorded that of the twelve Peter denied his Master and Judas betrayed Him. It has committed errors and made mistakes, but nothing human is exempt from infirmity. No other party in this or any other country in the present or previous age has ever exerted influence so enormous and so beneficent upon the essential nature of government and the destiny of mankind. It is the custodian of the political and social ideas in pursuance of which the exiles of Jamestown and Plymouth sought a new world, wrote the Declaration of Independence and built a nation upon the foundation stones of liberty, justice and equality.

These views, so concisely and forcibly set forth by Mr. Ingalls, are shared by many thousands of intelligent citizens of the republic. They are conscious that ambitious and designing men have sought to use the republican party for the furtherance of their own selfish designs. They know that these men, with a persistence worthy a better cause, have sometimes succeeded in their plans. They realize that a long and almost unbroken record of success for a period of thirty years has attracted many individuals to the party who care nothing for its principles, and who are republicans simply for the opportunities which membership in the party presents. Hence they have not hesitated to criticize with freedom and independence the actions of some of the men who have sprung into leadership. They have warned these leaders of the inevitable result of their mistaken actions, and, at times when there seemed no alternative, have not hesitated to cast their ballots against unworthy candidates.

And yet they are in hearty accord with Senator Ingalls. They believe the republican party is the best political organization that the world ever saw. They are proud of the magnificent record which it has spread upon the pages of American history. They glory in the names of Lincoln, Grant, Chase and the other illustrious men who have led the party and served the nation. They believe its principles must prevail if the republic is to cotinue its career of prosperity. They will give those principles an earnest and hearty support, not only because they are founded in political wisdom, but also because the theories of the democratic party are inherently vicious and would destroy the national prosperity.

Our Farmer Fathers

From the Minneapolis Tribune.

"It is sometimes well to look back over the road, take bearings, and measure progress. When we find farmers and laborers politically in arms against alleged oppression and hard times, we naturally turn to view the conditions of 'the good old times' when everybody was prosperous and contented.

"The farmer of the day makes two special complaints: High prices for what he buys and low prices for what he sells. How was it with our farmer fathers?

"Take the staple drygoods article, calico. In 1790 it cost 58 cents a yard; in 1830, 29 cents; in 1860, 11 cents, in 1891, 5 cents.

"Take the staple grocery article, sugar. In 1790 it cost 18½ cents for cheap brown grades; in 1830, 15 cents; in 1860, 10 cts.; in 1891, 5½ cents for granulated.

"For what the farmer sells, take the staple dairy product, butter. The prices in Massachusetts are as follows; In 1790, 11 cents; in 1830, 18 cents; in 1860, 26 cents; in 1891, 30 to 35.

"The staple meat product, dressed beef, in Massachusetts sold in 1790 at only 3½ cents; in 1830 7½ cents; in 1860, 12 cents; in 1891, 12 to 18.

"Our farmer fathers of revolutionary days whistled among the stones and pumpkin-vines of sterile New England, attired in cotton jeans and shirtings that cost 50 cents a yard, slept on ticking at 90 cents and if rich enough, wiped the prespiration from their brows with hankerchiefs that cost 70 cents. Their wives, if unusually stylish, paraded in muslins at 75 cents, ginghams at 55 and cambric at $1. Pins were 15 cents a paper; for matches, everybody borrowed fire; and for farm implements and machinery, the hoe and scythe were as all important as to-day's sulky plow and self-binder.

"Those were the 'good old days' when there were no debts nor Donnellys, no machinery nor mortages, and few products, profits, Peffers or People's parties. Yet, what the farmer sold brought not much more than one-half what it brings to-day, and what the farmer bought cost more than double what it costs to-day."

—Service in Lutheran Hall on Sunday, August 9th, morning and evening.

A Suggestion for the Alliance.

One great trouble with the Farmers' Alliance programme of demands as it stands now is that it is mainly destructive, and not constructive. The Alliance wants to abolish the present financial system and to do away with banks, before it begins any constructive work. If it would turn its energies into more positive, practicable and profitable channels it might, accomplish more.

Why, for instance, should not the Farmers' Alliance take up the postal savings bank idea and help to establish a system of savings in every post office in the land? If, instead of clamoring like paupers for the government to make them a present of $50 apiece in paper money, they would invest their savings in postal banks, they would become creditors instead of debtors, and would draw interest instead of paying it. In this way they could become capitalists instead of borrowers, and reap the benefits of a financial system on whose disadvantages they dwell, but whose advantages hitherto they have seemed to ignore.

The advantages that would accrue to the farmers from the use of a postal savings bank system would be numerous. They are so obvious that they hardly need to be pointed out. The encouragement of thrift, the development of self-help and self-reliance and independence of character are fully as important as the more material benefits that are gained from savings.

If the farmers should take up this matter they would have the co-operation of powerful forces. The newspapers would help them; the present Administration would help them, and with their influence in the next Congress they could easily pass a postal savings bank law.

In the last report of the Postmaster General the subject was discussed, and Mr. Wanamaker said, among other things:

"To teach economy and thrift as leading up to adequate citizenship falls short if there is no adequate provision for the safe keeping of savings. Such places ought to be within an hour's walk of the home of every workingman. They cannot be left to private capitalists to provide, because it would not pay them to deal in small sums or perform the necessary labor. The post offices and the postmasters are in every respect rightly situated to do this work. It would be a great comfort to the people to have these banks, that could not be affected in times of financial panic."

Finally, the Postmaster-General concludes with a formal recommendation that such banks be established, to pay one-half of 1 per cent. less interest than the average rate paid by private bankers.

Here is a field for work in which the Farmers' Alliance could do great things and confer lasting benefit upon its members. The scheme would be beneficial when carried out; it is altogether practicable, and it has received already the unqualified indorsement of the present Administration.

Let the farmers insist that the Fifty-second Congress shall enact a law establishing postal savings banks. Such an act would cover a multitude of legislative sins and save many a farmer from financial distress and ruin.

Success Without Quay.

One would imagine by the tone of the Democratic and so called Independent press that the organization of the Republican National Committee was a matter of direct interest to those opposed to Republican rule. The resignation of Chairman Quay is evidently a move that they hardly expected, much as they have been hoping for such a step on his part. With such a person of experience and ability as General Clarkson at the helm the management and practical work will go on with efficiency and activity. He is not a man to remain inactive at his post, or to allow the enemy to gain strength at his expense. Thoroughly systematic, apprised of the movements of the enemy at every step, the committee will show no lack of interest or aggressive energy.

With a change of this character the party is likely to gain as it directs attention into new personal relations, without weakening the general interests of the organization. The chairmanship of such an organization is a position of responisibility and constant care, and the promotion of an efficient leader is calculated to strengthen the working of the party machinery.

Let the Democracy, the Independent press and the Mugwumps fret and squirm; it only shows the spirit of unrest awakened. The Republican party is of age and can select its own leaders without consulting Colonel McClure, Henry Watterson or any other dictator who only makes suggestions to decoy and mislead.

The campaign of 1892 will find the Republican party united in all its forces, which means a victory at the polls, even without Colonel Quay at the front to thwart the schemes of fraudin the perpetration of which the Democracy relies.

Better Than A Sunday Law.

Some religious zealots in the city of Bradford Pa., got up a petition this spring, signed by 579 individuals, to have the city council pass an ordinance to close up everything and stop all work in that city on Sunday in other words to get the city council to do that which they themselves did not care to do, by seeing that the State Sunday law was enforced. During the agitation, the editor of the "Bradford Era" made the following pertinent statement, which we would that every advocate of a Sunday law or Sunday ordinance would take to heart:

"If every man, woman and child will abstain from making any purchases whatever on the Sabbath, and buy all their cigars and soda-water on Saturday night, we guarantee that every place of business on Main street will be closed on the first day of the week, without calling upon the Mayor to impose any four-dollar fines."

After the question had received a thorough discussion, both through the daily papers of the city and by way of a public hearing, the Ordinance Committee submitted the following very sensible report, which appeared in the "Badford Era," of July 7,

"Your committee to whom the within ordinance and petition was referred. report adversely, for the following reason:

"The ordinance is framed in accordance with the act of 1794, and we believe that such a law belongs to the Dark Ages and never should have been enacted by this great Commonwealth, settled by William Penn and his Quaker friends.

"We believe that such a law is antagonistic to the principles of this Repuplic, knowing that it would, if enforced, deprive all laboring people of recreation, and, furthermore, that it is an infringement on the liberty of men, women, and children.

"We believe that a majority or those who signed this petition did so in ignorance of the fact that the act of 1794, which is a dead letter on the statue books, gives them the same powers this ordinance calls for. The only effect city legislation can have is to transfer the burden of enforcing this statute from the petitioners to the city thereby relieving themselves of the responsibility and odium of prosecuting offenders against this law. Your committee deem it unwise to place such responsibility and expense upon the city.

"We recommend to the good people of Bradford that they can best secure the closing of all places of business on Sunday by declining to purchase anything on that day. No buyers, no sellers."

Let all Ordinance Committee, State Legislatures, and Congress itself, when likewise petitioned, follow the example of the Bradford Ordinance Committee, which had the courage to settle this question from principle and not from precedent.

State Elections This Year.

Pennsylvania, November 3, will elect Treasurer and Auditor General, and vote whether a Constitutional Convention shall be held and elect delagates to the same.

Iowa, November 3, will elect Governor and other State officers and Legislature.

Kentucky, August 3, will elect Governor and other officers and Legislature, and vote upon the Constitution framed by the convention which was elected August 4, 1890.

Maryland, November 3, will elect Governor and other State officers and Legislature, and vote upon six proposed amendments to the Constitution of the State. The first empowers the Governor to disapprove separate items in appropriation bills; the second restricts the exemption of corporations from taxation; the fourth relates to the election of County Commissioners; the fifth authorizes the sale of the State's inserest in all works of internal improvement and the sixth empowers the Legislature to provide for the taxation of mortgages, if such taxation is imposed, in the country or city where the mortgaged property is situated.

Massachusetts, November 3, will elect Governor and other State officers and Legislature.

Mississippi, November 3, will elect three Railroad Commissioners and Legislature.

Nebraska, November 3, will elect Associate Justice of the Supreme Court and two Regents of the State University.

New Jersey, November 3, will elect Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, Attorney General, Engineer and Surveyor, and Senate, the Assembly, ten Justices of the Supreme Court and a Representative in Congress from the Tenth district.

Ohio, November, will elect Governor and other State officers and Legislature and vote upon a proposed amendment to the Constitution providing for uniformity of taxation.

Texas, August 11, will vote upon five proposed amendments to the Constitution of the State. The first provides for the registration of voters in towns of 10,000 inhabitants and over, the second relates to the maintenance of the common schools, the third fixes the maximum rate of interest at 10 per cent, the fourth relates to local option, and the fifth provides for establishing two or more civil courts of appeal.

Virginia, November 3, will elect one-half its Senate and its House of Delegates.

THE RIGHT KIND OF TALK.

Colonel Clarkson who will succeed Senator Quay as Chairman of the Republican National committee, talks like a levelheaded leader and a man of sense, says the Scranton Republican. Being interviewed on the subject of the resignation of Chairman Quay, and especially with reference to the allegation that the committee is opposed to the allegation that the committee is opposed to the re-nomination of General Harrison and in favor of Blaine, he expressed himself as follows;

"The Republican National Executive committee is not a Blaine committee, nor a Harrison committee nor any otner man's committee, it is a Republican committee and nothing else. The name of the Admin. istration was not once mentioned in connection with the proceedings of the committee. The work of the committee will be actively continued until the meeting of the National committee in November, when we shall report to that body for further instructions.

In these few vigorous sentences is embodied a sentiment which should animate all political committees, whether local, county, State, or National. Such bodies are not constituted for the purpose of advancing the interests and ambitions of one man or class of men in a party; they are the representatives and servants of the entire party; in fact they constitute the machinery of the orgrnization, and nothing could be more unfair or unjust than such committee to use the power and influence they possess in the interests of certain individuals or against others equally or more deserving of recognition.

We had a forcible illustration of such methods and the natural consequences in this State last year. It is remembered what methods were resorted to in order to make Mr. Andrews Chairman of the State committee, and as soon became apparent the sole object was the use of the machinery of the party to force the nomination of Mr. Delamater for Governor. The plan succeeded admirably until the nomination had been effected, then came the revolt, and the result was that Pennsylvania to-day has a Democratic Governor in spite of its legitimate Republican majority of from 60,000 to 80,000.

It has frequently occurred, also, that county committees have been purposely so constituted as to be used in the interest of certain aspirants for desirable local officers, and sooner or later the punishment has almost invariable come. Political committees are designed for the benefit of political parties, and not to serve the interests of individual aspirants. Doubtless the Republican National committee could be so manipulated as to be of great advantage to some particular individual aspirant for the presidential nomination. Colonel Clarkson says that committee is no man's committee, that it is a Republican party would be all the stronger and better if all committees were conducted on a similar basis.

Word From The King Case.

Col. T. E. Richardson, associate attorney with Don M. Dickson, for the defendant in the King case, being written to in regard to whether anything could be ascertained as to the prospects of Judge Hammond's rendering a decision in said case, wrote the clerk of the United States District court at Memphis, Tenn., Mr. John B. Clough, and received the following in reply, dated July 7:—

"I have spoken to Judge Hammond several times about the decision in your King habeas corpus case, and again since the receipt of your letter; and he expects to decide it now very soon. In fact, his opinion is partly written. In no event, however, can an appeal now be taken, whichever way the decision is, before fall; that really it can now make little difference except the satisfaction to the parties and counsel. I will promptly notify you as the opinion is filed.

"Your friend,

"John B. Clough."

This case involvas the constitutionality of former proceedings against Mr. King, in the way of fines and imprisonment, under the State Sunday law. From a trial before a Justice of the Peace it went to a county circuit court, thence to the Supreme Court of the State, and finally to the United States District Court, from which, in the event of an adverse decision to Mr. King, the National Religious Liberty Association, which has the case in charge, will appeal it to the court of last resort, the United States Supreme Court.

The Strike Collapses.

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 30.—The president of the Amalgamated association had a conference with the Steelton strikers this morning, and heard their side of the controversy with the Pennsylvania Steel company. He decided that the strike was merely local, and that the men had violated the laws of the association by striking contrary to the decisions of the national association and the district executive board. Under this decision a committee was appointed by the men to visit President Bent, of the steel company, and arrange for a settlement of the trouble.

The depression caused by the collapse of the strike at Steelton is very evident in the silent groups of men who are seen on the street corners. The men feel that they were duped by the leaders and say that, even though their strike was not ordered by the Amalgamated, yet once being out the Amalgamated association should have helped them. The deputy sheriffs were withdrawn to-night, but the approaches to the works are still under watch. President Bent, of the steel company, says he will not consider any applications for work from any of the strikers and will send for what men he wants.

The representative of the men who went to Steelton from Harrisburg to-day to try and effect some arrangement with Major Bent was refused admission. No more department will be started this week. There will be about 500 men who were foremost in the strike who will lose their places. It was noticeable that not a row occurred during the entire strike.

Counterfeiters Plead Guilty.

ERIE, July 29.—Chauncey Marble, the wealthy lumberman whose rescue was attempted at Columbus, Warren county, by some of his friends, was brought into United States Circuit Court this morning and pleaded guilty to the indictment for having counterfeit money in his possession. Mr. Marble is a man of 35 years, and being quite weak from the strain on his nervous system, made no protest when Judge Reid sentenced him to pay a fine of $50 and undergo a term of two years in the Allegheny penitentiary. Marble has always born an honorable reputation until the Treasury Department located a mint in his house. Marshal Harrar took him to the penitentiary to-day. Chauncey Marble, James Holden, of New York, Reuben Palmer, of Union county, Ceremo Cremolia, of Pittsburgh, and sleek little Jimmie Holden, of New York, secured light sentences by pleading guilty. Holden won a wife while in Erie county. From the time the bantam counterfeiter fell into the hands of Detective Sweeney he was in receipt of almost daily letters from a young lady, and when the United States Court convened she came into court. To-day, as the Marshal was about to remove Holden to the Western Penitentiary, it leaked out that Holden, after his sentence, had secured a marriage license to Miss Josephine Knife, of New York, the faithful young woman who had comforted him by her letters during his confinement. Holden admits that his wife has gone to Philadelphia to prepare him a home at the expiration of his two years and three months term in the Pen.

Appropriated $80,000.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The Latin American department of the World's Fair has just received a cablegram from Bogata, announcing that the congress of Columbia has appropriated $80,000 in gold to defray the expense of making a proper representation of the resources of that country at the Chicago exposition. Commissioners have also been appointed to take charge of the preparation of an exhibit and have begun their labors.

Brazilian advices announce the appointment of a commission of eight members to take charge of the Brazilian representation at the Columbian exposition. Among the members is Professor Orville Derby, who accompanied Agassiz in his geological surveys in Brazil, and who for many years has been in charge of the geological and minerological section of the National museum at Rio de Janeiro.

A Long Spell of Fasting.

Paterson, N.J., July 30.—Dennis Quigley an inmate at St. Joseph's hospital, this city had not tasted food in sixty days up to last Saturday. He is a miner from Sterling and was undergoing treatment at the hospital for spinal and stomach troubles. He could not digest any food and his sense of taste was almost destroyed His condition did not improve and he concluded to try fasting. Last Saturday after passing the sixteth day without taking any nourishment save an occasional cup of tea or a glass of water he was able to eat a hearty meal and claims to enjoy better health than for some months.

Discharging Census Bureau Employes.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—About 1,000 clerks out of 3,200 who have been employed at various times in Washington on work connected with the Eleventh census, have been discharged up to the present time. To-morrow about 900 more will sever their connection with the service, and on the 15th of August a further reduction of 400 will be made. This brings the force down to something less than 1,000 clerks. These discharges are made necessary by the fact that the work for which they were employed has been completed or has reached a stage where it can be handled by the reduced force.

Claiming a Welsh Estate.

POTTSVILLE, July 30.—C. M. Miller, of Park Place, a small coal town near here, is working up evidence to establish the claims of heirs in this country to the Evans estate in Wales, worth $1,000,000. The Rev M. H. Mishler, pastor of the First Reformed church of this place, is searching the baptismal records. The estate was owned by Lot Evans, who came from Wales before 1800 and founded the town of Morgantown, Berks county. Among the claimants are the Evans family, of St. Clair.

The Building Collapsed.

PITTSBURGH, July 29.—A new building collapsed this morning. It was being erected in the finishing department of the Oil Well Supply company's plant, at Franks-town, Second avenue. Two men were instantly killed and four injured. Some of the injured have since died. The accident occurred about 9.30 o'clock, while the men were busily at work. Without any warning the walls collapsed and the building caved in.

Those killed by the accident were :

B. Corkin—Head crushed ; married ; lived at Homestead.

Two unknown Hungarians, who were mangled almost beyond recognition.

The injured are :

George Baker—Head cut, leg broken and brain injured. Taken to the Homeopathic hospital. Condition serious. Married and lived on Bigelow street.

J. Parker—Back injured and leg cut. Lived on Williams Hill.

J. Colera—Scalp wound. Married and resides in Hazelwood.

Frank Smith—Foot crushed and body bruised ; aged 24 years.

George Lemon—Back bruised. Lives at 38 Franklin street.

Immediately after the accident occurred word was sent to the Fourteenth Ward police station, and soon the patrol and ambulance wagons were on the way to the scene. The dead were then removed to the morgue and the wounded taken to the Homeopathic hospital.

At the time the accident happened Messrs. Riter and Conley, who had the contract for the erection of the building, had forty-two men at work. In addition to this number there were about twenty-five men employed in the pudd'ing department of the mill, standing around watching the work as it progressed.

The Eagle Screamed.

HUNTINGTON CENTER, CONN., July 30.—Old Huntington never had such a time as it enjoyed to-day. It was all the result of a petty affair that took place on the night of July 3. For years the boys of Huntington Center have been in the habit of celebrating the Fourth by the ringing of the St. Paul Episcopal Church bell. S. W. Linsley, the aged sexton, who is also senior warden, on the afternoon of July 3 went to the church, nailed up the windows, barricaded the doors and removed the clapper of the bell. The boys effected an entrance to the church in some mysterious way. One of the young men was arrested for burglariously entering the church, a charge, if proved, meant State Prison for the young man. This action aroused public sentiment. The pressure upon the complainants caused them to waver in their determination to prosecute.

The citizens subscribed liberally to a purse to defend young Sluton. The prosecutors gave way to public opinion. This was the cause of the gathering to-night, and the American eagle's screams were never more strident and never penetrated more patriotic hearts than to-night.

Once More in Ohio.

BELLAIRE, O., July 31—Another has been added to the late list of railroad accidents in Ohio. At about ten o'clock this morning passenger train No. 4, on the Bellaire, Zanesville and Cincinnati narrow gauge railroad, left the track three miles south of Bellaire, two cars being overturned and dragged some distance by the engine. There were seventy persons on the train. The two cats that turned over in the ditch were crowded with well known people of this section. Assistance was soon at hand from other passengers and the trainmen and when all were finally taken out of the wrecked cars it was found that fourteen people had been injured, four of them seriously and some fatally.

The list of the injured is : John Morris, baggagemaster, hurt internally, badly injured and will probably die ; Charles McElroy, leg broken and otherwise bruised ; William McElroy, head hurt and internal injuries ; John Irwin, of Bethel, Ohio, head crushed and scalp injured ; G. P. Wilcox, of York, head badly injured. In addition to these were many badly bruised, but able to take care of themselves and this afternoon went to their homes.

Two Thousand Men Working.

HARRISBURG, July 19.—The strike at Steelton goes on unabated, but the fact remains that there is an increased force of men at work every day. To-day there were, according to the time-keepers, 2,000 men at work and arrangements were made, by reason of the number of applicants, to start up new departments to-morrow, when the Bessemer, bloom and universal mills will be put in operation.

Grasshoppers Destroying Crops.

VAN WERT, O., July 31.—Grasshoppers are doing considerable damage to the oats, pastures and meadows in parts of this and adjacent counties. Many farmers have cut their oats before fully ripe in order to save the crops, but the pests work on the grain in the shock. No damage to corn is anticipated. A Fort Wayne, Ind., dispatch says : Allen county farmers say that the grasshoppers are seriously injuring the crops, particularly oats, and that they will soon get into the clover.

Killed Her Former Lover.

SEELWOOD, Fla., July 31—Late last night Miss Myra Fancher, a beautiful girl only 16 years old, shot and instantly killed A. C. Jones, section foreman on the Florida Central railroad. She lay in wait for him at a street corner and when he approached she blew out his brains with a 32 calibre revolver. For nearly a year past Jones had been paying devoted attention to Miss Fancher and common report designated them as engaged to be married. About two months ago, however, Jones discarded her and married another girl.

Beware of Ointment for Catarrh that contains Mercury,

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derang the whole system when entering it through the mucous surface. Such articles should never be used exept on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Haill's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally and act directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system. In buying Haill's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

Two Deaths From Yellow Fever.

MONTREAL, July 31.—The Norwegian bark Neptune from Rio de Janeiro for Quebec was picked up in the Gulf of St. Lawrence to-day, short-handed, with yellow fever on board, and was at once rowed to Goose Island quarantine. There were two deaths on the passage, yet Captain Sorenzon went into Sydney, C. B., without reporting any sickness on board.

Some Pension Figures.

WASHINGTON, July 2?—A statement prepared at the pension office shows that the number of pensions granted during the week ended July 13 was 5,917 on which the first payments averaged $125,41. The aggregate of the first payments on these was $724,219.

Elegant Fashion Books.

The new Fashion Journals, "La Mode," "La Mode de Paris," and "Album des Modes," published by A. McDowell & Co., 4 West 14th Street, New York, are the most elegant of their kind ever brought to our notice. The styles are drawn by the best artists ; and the books are produced by rival houses in Paris, each trying to excel the other in the character of its publications. Formerly they were printed only in French ; but they are now published in English for the use of American readers. These journals furnish the styles one month in advance of any similar publications ; and they have a practical department, in which lessons are given each month on how to make dresses, etc. The admirable fashions, the lessons in dressmaking, and the giving of the styles one month earlier than heretofore are strong points in favor of these Fashion Books, causing them to be called "The Favorites." These excellent publications can be obtained from all newsdealers.

Delivering Pension Letters.

The new ruling of the postoffice department in regard to the delivery of pension letters is of interest to a large number or residents of this town and vicinity. It is very explicit and directs that letters addressed to a pensioner must not be delivered to any person in whose care thay may be addressed and under no circumstances must the letters of pensioners sent from the pension office or from any United States pension agency be delivered to any attorney, claim agent, broker or any other person. This is done to avoid, if possible the perpetration of fraud which has been frequent in late years in the pension department.

The Ex-Governor Here.

Ex-Governor James A Beaver arrived in Renovo last evening on fast line and remained at the Renovo Hotel over night. This morning he went to Ridgway on Erie mail. But few knew that Bellefonte's distinguished citizen was here or he might have been overwhelmed with calls from his numerous Renovo friends.—Renovo News.

To Recover from the Grip USE SPEER'S GRAPE WINES, —ALSO— UNFERMENTED GRAHE JUICE Used in the principal Churches for Communion Excellent for females weakly persons and the aged

ADOPTED IN HOSPITALS AS THE BEST FOR INVALIDS.

Speer's Port Grape Wine! FOUR YEARS OLD.

THIS CELEBRATED WINE is the pure juice of the dead ripe Oporto Grape, raised in Speer's vineyards, and left hanging until they shrink and become partly raisined before gathering. Its invaluable TONIC AND STRENGTHENING PROPERTIES are unsurpassed by any other Wines. Being produced under Mr. Speer's personal supervision, it purity and genuineness are guaranteed by the principal Hospitals and Boards of Health who have examined it. The youngest child and the weakest invalids use it to advantage. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated, and suited to the various ailments that affect the weaker sex. It is in every respect A WINE TO BE RELIED ON Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice.

Speer's Socialite Claret

It is held in high estimation for its richness as Dry Table Wine, especially suited for dinner use.

Speer's P. J. Sherry

Is a wine of Superior Character and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made.

Speer's P. J. Brandy

IS A PURE distillation of the grape, and stands unrivalled in this Country for medical purposes. It has a peculiar flavor, similar to that of the grapes from which it is distilled. See that the signature of "ALFRED SPEER Passaic, N. J.," is over the cork of each bottle. SOLD BY DRUGGISTS WHO KEEP FIRST CLASS WINES. D & W o-s-w

ADDTIONAL LOCALS.

—Pay your taxes for 1891.

—Trains now run on time.

—Cherries are still in the market.

—New cabbage is plenty and cheap.

—Wednesday night was a good night for eels.

—Home grown tomatoes will soon be in market.

—Wonder how many got their water tax reduced.

—Bellefonte's street sprinkler never neglects his duty.

—Send us "personals" regarding the coming and going of your visitors.

—The republican state convention will be held in Harrisburg on August 19th.

—The are light illuminated East Linn street Wednesday night for the first time.

—A new roof is being put on the house occupied by Mr. Scoot on Railroad street.

—Seven months of this year gone already, and what has Bellefonte to show for it?

—The Young Ladies Mutual Admiration Society picniced at Eagles' Nest on Wednesday.

—Sheriff Ishler was out after a team of mules on Wednesday night but he failed to capture them.

—A crusade against the corset is to be organized by some of the most prominent society women.

—A violent wind and rain storm visited Williamsport and vicinity on Thursday causing considerable damage.

—Bald-headed Tom Reed has returned from Europe and now we can expect some news in the democratic papers.

—Hazleton is already putting forth an effort to have the State Firemen's Convention held in that place next year.

—The street commissioner is raising the crossings in various parts of the town. A decided improvement, by the way.

—Lock Haven has organized a new band. By the way, that reminds us, what has become of Bellefonte's new band?

—Now it is plain Senator Stanley Matthew Quay, he having resigned the chairmanship of the National Republican committee.

—Mr. John W. Miller, of near Roopsburg, claims to have raised the largest radish heard of this season. It measured sixteen and one-half inches in circumference.

—The Lock Haven papers are wise in counselling their home base ball club to play their best to-morrow, as it is evident the editors recognize the ability of the Bellefonte players.

—These seem to be the days of resignations. Secretary Noble, of the Interior Department, has handed in his resignation, It is not to be supposed that any person will ascribe this event to politics.

—The duplicates have been placed in collector S. D. Ray's hands and now all persons who will pay their taxes on or before sixty days from August first will be given a reduction of five per cent.

—On Thursday State Treasury Boyer drew a check for $225,628.75 for the payment of the semi-annual interest on the State debt, which is due to day. A pretty big interest to pay with millions in the treasury.

—The work of putting in the new water closets into the old stone school house will be completed this week. The job, when done, will be firstclass and will be one of the greatest improvement possible on the old school house. The work is being done by Hillibish & Co.

—Bellefonte will soon be booming. With Mann's Axe Factory in operation, the Bellefonte furnace in full blast, the Glass works and Nail works running in full time there will be work for all. And then when work is commenced on the Beech Creek railroad up Bald Eagle and on the new State Insane asylum times will be extra flush.

—About forty members of Company B were out on drill on Friday evening. The field of their exploits was the diamond. In order to keep the crowd back out of the way a picket line was formed all around and a number of the boys in blue, with bayonets set and guns presented, patroled their beats like the stern sentinel of thirty years ago. Of Company B can it be said that it improves continually and we expect to see it carry off the palm at the coming encampment.

—Considereble trouble is had in many places throughout the county by the spread of Canada thistle. Persons are careless about cutting them when they should and the result is a large crop is allowed to go to seed and then a large crop the next year appeareth. It is the duty of every property owner to see that all thistles, if any, on his property are cut down before seeding time and for each and every neglect to so do he can be prosecuted and made to pay a fine of $15.

—The Fish Commission is going to give us something stunning in the way of a report in a few months says the Harrisburg Telegraph. Instead of printing the pictures of the various fishing of Pennsylvania in plain black, they are to be printed in the natural colors of the fish, and most beautiful pictures they make. The report will be illuminated with fifteen of these pictures, prepared by a Washington gentleman, and already the United States Government has asked for the United States Fish Commission's report. The Pennsylvania Fish Book will be in as great demand as the Bird Book.

A Possible Murder.

The Philipsburg correspondent of the Altoona Tribune says: Word was received here this morning that a possible murder and suicide had taken place at Keystone Hill, an English hamlet situated in Clearfield county about one and a half miles from Phillipsburg. This morning at 8 o'clock an investigation of the following facts: Reuben Wilkison and John Wilson are Englishmen and fast friends. Both came to this country about four years ago, Wilson paying Wilkison's passage. Wilson is married and has five children. Wilkinson is unmarried and has made his home with Wilson's family.

Recently reports reached Wilson's ears that a criminal intimacy existed between his wife and Wilkison, and while he did not believe the rumors to have any foundation in fact. he told his wife that she had better tell Wilkison to leave and in that way stop the talk. She did not do so, however, but said that hhr husband should tell him to leave. Still more recently Wilson heard the charges repeated, and again he asked his wife to give Wilkison his walking papers, that he would not do so owing to old friendship.

This morning Mrs. Wilson told Wilkinson of the report, and asked thim to leave. He expostulated, and words following, he picked up a piece of a base ball bat, and while the woman was combing her hair in front of a looking-glass, struck her on the back of the head. The woman staggered a few steps and fell out of the door into the yard. Her skull is badly fractured.

Wilkinson stood for a moment contemplating the deed he had committed, and believing that he had killed the woman, took a razor and cut his throat from ear to ear, though not severing either the jugular vein or windpipe. Wilkinson was arrested and is now in the Cottage hospital for treatment. The woman is in a very critical condition and with little hopes of her recovery. Wilkinson's age is about 34. Mrs. Wilson is 31 years of age,

Andrew Force, a miner employed in the Forest colliery, at Munson's Station, was struck by a fall of top coal last Thursday and received injuries from which he died yesterday.

Millheim Musings.

D. C. Gingerick made a trip to the county capital on Monday.

Edward Miess is in Centre Hall working at his trade, that of a painter.

Mr. J. C. Meyer, of Bellefonte, passed through Millheim on last Monday on his way to Aaronsburg.

Mrs. Springer, widow of W. J. Springer, deceased, has returned from Centre Hall where she was visiting her brother, Mr. S. Harper.

On July 26th Mr. Frank Hartman and a friend, while driving around at the bush meeting, three miles east of Aaronsburg, collided their buggy with that of Mr. Noah Stovers. The result was Mr. Stover's horse frightened and ran away throwing Mr. Stover out on his head, breaking his skull and collar bone and otherwise seriously injuring him. It is not believed he can recover.

A certain scoundrel has been making himself rather too free in this place the past few days. On Friday night he broke into Mr. Clapp's residence and stole ten dollars, and on Monday night he broke into the residence of Miss Anna Miller, but this time got nothing. The next night he followed Mr. Decker to his butcher shop, evidently bent on some evil purpose. The next thing he knows he will get a trip over the mountain.

The Game Laws.

About two months ago we published the game law of Pennsylvania, but at the request of an old subscriber we again give the same and would advise all sportsmen to cut the same out and paste it on their gun barrel. The law is as follows.

Woodcock, June 1 to January 1; quail or Virginia partridge, November 1 to December 15; ruffled grouse, commonly called pheasant or pinnated grouse, commonly called prairie chicken, October 1 to January 1; rail bird or reed bird, September 1st to December 1st; elk, wild deer or antelope, October 1st to December 15th; gray, black or fox squirrel, September 1st to January 1st; hare, commonly called rabbit, November 1st to January 1st; wild turkey, October 15th to January 1st; wild fowl, September 1st to May 1st; upland or grass plover, July 15th to January 1st; lake trout, January 1st to September 30th; German carp, September 1st to May 1st; black bass, green bass, yellow bass, willow bass, rock bass, Lake Erie or green bass, May 30th to January 1st; pike or pickerel, June 1st to January 1st.

First Penn'a Cavalry.

The First Pennsylvania Cavalry will hold their annual reunion at Emporium, Cameron county, on September 9th and and 10th, and great preparations are being made there to receive them. Among the distinguished people expected to be present on this occasion are Ex-Governors Curtin and Beaver, Gen. Hastings, Ex-Lieutenant Governor Stone and others. The Cameron County Press says that this will be the greatest event that has transpired in that town for many years and will attract a large number of people. The town will be beautifully decorated with arches, flags, &c, and at night the streets will be illuminated with natural gas. The fire department and a number of invited organizations will take part in the parade, and last but not least the handsome ladies of the town will be out in all their beauty From this it is plain to be seen that Emporium expects to have one of the brightest and most enjoyable occasions in her history.

Sweethearting by Moonlight.

The man in the moon is a very intelligent person, says Ruth Ashmore, He see a great many things that he never tells about; but, in this gay summer time, won't you be a little careful that when he looks down on you he will be able to gossip to the stars and the daily newspapers about what you are doing, because it is so innocent? Won't you just remember that while the moon looks down on you sailing at night along with some favored admirer he is thinking to himself all the time "How foolish that girl is to go out with that one man! He cannot talk to her and man ge the boat too; and there is certain to be trouble. Why in the world did she not have a whole party come out with her!" Now that is a very wise thought of the gentleman who lives up in the moon. Then, when he sees you strolling through the woods a mile from home and only one of the most charming fellows in the world with you; sees you hunting for wild flowers under his dim light and notice the immense amount of interest you take in each other he apparently shrugs his shoulders and thinks out loud, "Well, well! What a lot of foolishness there is in girls, anyway. She will catch cold out in the night air with nothing around her; she won't find half as many flowers as she would if my friend the sun, was shining bright and she probably trip over a stone or a fallen branch. Even if she wanted to come out just to talk to the young man she is very foolish because he would think she was a great deal more desirable if she insisted on staying at home and sitting on the veranda where all the rest of the people are. He could talk to her quietly and he would think how much nicer it was for her to be there than to be out rambling in the woods even with him, for, if she went with him, it is just possible she might go with any other man who asked her." The man in the moon is very, very wise. He has looked down upon millions and billions of girls, and he knows what he is talking about; and if you take his advice and mine the little bit of sweethearting that goes on under the moonlight will be where all the rest of the people are.

His Record.

Judge Orvis and wife, his son Ellis and wife, and the Judge's two daughters returned home from the Spruce Run fishing camp on Thursday. The Judge said that they spent two very pleasant weeks there. The Judge, his son Ellis, and Henry C. Quigley, made the largest catch of trout on the last day of the fishing season out of any stream controlled by the Association. They caught 225, 119 being the largest number any previous day.

There was 1,400 trout caught by members of the Association out of their streams during the season. No account was kept of the number caught by parties fishing on permits from the secretary of the Association.—Harrisburg Times.

Death Near Spring Mills.

On Tuesday night last, the grim messenger, death, entered the family of Mr Joseph Bichell, living a short distance below Spring Mills, and took therefrom the head of the family, the father. Mr. Bichell had been in bad health for many year, his ailment being a dropsical complaint, which finally terminated in his demise as above state. He was a man well up in years, and had but recently removed from his farm to the residence where he died. He was a highly respected gentleman and was a member of the Lutheran church. His pastor, Rev. Fischer conducted the funeral which occured this morning.

Former Belief n early Dead.

Mrs. Elanor Steele, of near Hawkeye, Iowa, died on Thursday of last week, the 23rd instant, leaving her baby just one week old. Mrs. Steele was a daughter of George H. Weaver, deceased, of Bellefonte, Centre county, where she was born May 23, 1855, being at her death 36 years and two months old, and being survived by her husband and five other children besides the baby. Mrs. Steele was one of Bellefonte's prettiest and most amiable girls and her death at so early an age is a matter of deep regret. Her married life was a very happy one and the sad event which has closed it is an almost insupportable blow to her family.

A Year's Work Yet.

Mr. W. W. Payard, who occupies a very important position in the sixth division of the census office, Washington, D. C., but who is now at his home in this place, tells us that the work in the population department of the census is almost completed, but that it is calculated it will take one year from September first, to complete the work in the vital and statistical departments of the 1890 census. At this rate of going by the time the people get the census it will be several years old.

Fell to the Wall.

On Thursday afternoon the P. R. R. club of Harrisburg engaged the home team on the glass works meadow grounds, with the result at the ending of the game of a victory for the home team by the score of 11 to 3. The game was not an over brilliant one from beginning to end. Some few good plays were made but they were not numerous. The poor work of the visiting team was probably the result of a bad right arm on their pitcher.

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL.

Lady Macdonald, the widow of the late Premier of Canada, opens the August Ladies' Home Journal with her first contribution to literature, in the opening article of a series which she has written for that magazine, descriptive of "An Unconventional Holiday," which, with a party of friends, and in her own manner, she enjoyed last summer through the most picturesque portions of Canada. Lady Macdonald's article is written in that delightfully fresh and unconventional manner of which we see so little in our modern literature, and yet which possesses such charm. Annie R. Ramsey has some very timely "Hints on Mountain Climbing"; Kate Tannatt Woods treats a new subject in telling what "The Girl Off to Boarding-school" should take with her; the poet Tennyson's wife is sketched in the series of "Unknown Wives of Well-Known Men"; a very helpful handful of articles are those which treat of all the "Summer Ills and Summer Dangers"; our different "Types of American Girls" are treated by four able writers; Jeannette L. Gilder has a clever character-sketch in "Pepper Hash"; Ellen Le Garde shows the benefit of "Swimming for Girls"; Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney's and Jessie O'Donnell's serials are continued; Dr. Talmage writes this month from his seashore home; Hezekiah Butterworth and Robert J. Burdette tell some "Bright Things for Boys". Mrs. Mollon has the best Fashion article supported by any magazine; Marian Parloa and Juliet Corson give some Dainties for the Summer Table; little Elsie Leslie writes of "Children on the Stage"; and all through this number there is a breath of summer and the stredgth of merit. The Journal shows in this issue how well it is conducted. One dollar per year. Published in Philadelphia by the Curtis Publishing Company.

How to be Happy in Summer.

Read the latest books.
Bathe early an often.
Seek cool, shady nooks.
Throw fancy work away.
Wear lightest, lowest shoes.
Ride at morn and walk at eve.
Believe that waiters are human.
Let hats be light and bonnets airy.
Eschew kid gloves and linen collars.
Hurry never, thus being at leisure ever.
Dress in cambrics, lawns and ginghams.
Be lavish with laundresses, fruit men and fans.
Court the sea breeze, but avoid the hot sands.
Let melons precede, and berries follow the breakfast.
Store up the sweet and give small place to the bitter.
Remember that seemingly heavy is sometimes gain.
Retire when in the mood and arise when refreshed.
Dress for freshest feeling and coolness; never mind the heavy fritters.
Remember that heredity of the people at the seashore for rest.
If you feel like doing a good deed, treat Jones street children to ice cream. That is mission work.
Do not tell your hostess how sweet the butter and cream were at your last summer's boarding place.
Remember that children are only small editions of older people, and that they have feelings quite as acute.
Look pleasantly at the tired stranger who moves wistfully at the part of the car seat over which you wraps, even if you do not offer her the seat.—Anna P. Payne, in Ladies Home Journal.

Run in Wedding.

Rev. J. W. White, a brother-in-law of ex-Governor Beaver, pastor of one of the churches at Milroy, was recently confronted full of hymenial perplexities. A couple came over the Seven mountains from Centre county to the parsonage, desiring him to unite them in marriage. Their license was issued in Centre county, and a question arose in the reverend gentleman's mind whether it was not the intent of the state law that the ceremony should be performed in the county in which the license is granted. Register and Recorder Boldren, at Lewistown, was phoned for an opinion and he thought the preacher was right in his view. Captain Moore, justice of the peace at Milroy, was also consulted, but differed from both the others. At this juncture a happy thought entered the person's mind, adopting which would place him on the safe side. By driving to the top of the crest of the Seven mountains he would reach the dividing line between Mifflin and Centre counties. The couple were willing and after a long drive the parties found themselves at the boundary. Stepping across the line Rev. White at once proceeded to solemnize the union of Edward Buhl and Maggie Burcel, of Spring Mills.

The groom, Edwin Rumbl, is the son of Mr. David Rubl, proprietor of the Spring Mills hotel and is a very popular young man, and his bride, Miss Burcel, is a very handsome lady, and the writer is to be congratulated upon the selection of his choice of a better half. The couple will continue to reside at Spring Mills in the future. They have the best wishes of all for future happiness.—Reporter

—The Bellefonte base ball club will go to Lock Haven on Saturday to play the club of that place and the Democrat, recognizing the prowess of the home team, wisely advises the Bellefonte team "the necessity of having every bone and sinew, and may not turn to weeping willows."

INGALLS ON WEALTH.

"The men who founded this goverment knew very well why they wanted no Mugwumps among them. They came here for a purpose. I often think that the 40,000 Englishmen that came here between 1607 and 1659 brought with them an idea of inconceivable power for the realization of which men had been struggling for years in vain. Revolution succeeded revolution and so it came to pass that the 40,000 men left home and crossed the sea and brought with them ideas of individualism, freedom of thought and speech and action and built up a new order of things founded upon justice, equality and liberty. They knew what they wanted. They knew what they came here for. They were not always delicate in their dealings with other people.

"The first thing they did when they landed on the shores of the Atlantic was to fall on their knees. Then they fell on the aborigines, and, I may add, since that time they have fallen on the Chinese. [Laughter] The name of all other tribes and people and nations is Dennis, because they get left. [Laughter and applause.]

"This is the race of men that has taken possession of the physical and moral and intellectual world. When Thomas Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence he did not mean to say that all men were equal morally, physically and intellectually. He didn't mean to say, for instance that William M. Evarts is the physical equal of John L. Sullivan; nor that, intellectually speaking, John L. Sullivan is the equal of James G. Blaine [prolonged applause]; or, to be impartial, the equal of Grover Cleveland. [Applause.] Nor that Jack the Ripper, or Frenchy No. 9, if that is his American designation is the equal of the Rev. Dr. Talmage. [Laughter.]

"What he meant to say was that all should be absolutely equal before the law. That every man should have unqualified and unrestricted right to a full, free and complete exercise of all the faculties that God Almighty endowed him with, and should have education to enable him to cultivate his faculties in order to carry out the good old Anglo-Saxon proverb to root, hog or die. I believe that is what the Declaration was written for and what this country was established for. The experiment has been tolerably successful so far, notwithstanding obstacles, barriers and mistakes which have been met with. The Emperor of Germany dreads the development of the immediate future, the Emperor of Russia incases himself in boiler iron when he travels to one of his towns, and some people doubt whether the Prince of Wales will ever ascend the throne of England.

"Ninety years ago in this country the richest man was George Washington, our first President. The estimated amount of his wealth aggregated about $800,000. It is safe to say to-day that scores of men have annual incomes that largely exceed that of the richest man in the country ninety years ago. One man at whose touch everything seems to turn to gold has a monthly revenue larger than General Washington's total wealth. At that time, ninety years ago, there was not a millionaire, a tramp, or a pauper in the country. Most of this great transformation occurred within the last forty years. To the great mass of the people life is but a hopeless toil that prevents them from seeing wife and children by daylight and leaves them an old age of hopeless mendicancy. Inquiring minds have been trying to find out why some men are worth millions, while others are starving. I question very much whether any one man ever earned one million of dollars. I will tell you in the strictest confidence that the only reason I am not worth one million dollars is because I did not know enough to get it. The most shining and illustrious example of evil to minds out West is Jay Gould.

"He and I are about the same age. I think I am a little heavier than he is (laughter. When he started out in life he had as the sum total of his posessions a patent mouse trap, which he took into Wall street and set it, and he has come pretty near catching the earth with it. I took my grip and my diploma about the same year and I went West to grow up with the country, and I am now a statesman out of employment. The injustice of my fellow citizen has given me a long interval for reflection, and I have been engaged during this calamitous epoch endeavoring to ascertain whether there is any law which prevents me from having a palace on the Hudson or in Kansas, a private car, a steam yacht, and a few hundred millions in gilt-edge securities. I have searched in vain to discover any legislation that did not bear equally upon Jay Gould and myself and the other citizens of the United States. All have equal claims, so far as I know, and the only reason I know why I am not a millionaire is because I had not brains enough to become one. (Laughter and cries of 'Oh, no.') When I was a boy and had playmates I remember that I used to put my ear at one end of a ninety-foot log while one of my playmates used to scratch at the other end. I could catch the sound distinctly. It is clear to me now that nature tried to tell me about the telephone. There was no legislation to prevent me fron inventing it. If I had brains enough I might have had the millions of Bell. The famous picture, 'The Angelus' brought $100,000. No citizen was prevented from painting it. It only required a few tubes of color, a camel's hair brush, a small square of canvas, and—brains. The paltry dauber who paints pictures for $2.50 apiece thinks he is a victim.

The People's Party.

SPRINGFIELD, O., August 5.—The people's party delegates have not arrived as rapidly as many of the sanguine leaders anticipated. There are about 200 here now and conservative ones say they will be satisfied if a delegation comes from each of the forty-seven counties with tickets in the field and the total number reaches 300.

The State convention assembled this afternoon, with Hugh Cavanaugh, of Cincinnati, as Temporary Chairman, the prejudices against him having been overcome.

Hugo Preyer says the platform, which will be reported this afternoon, will be constructed in the committee room from suggestions furnished by the people. J. C. H. Cobb, of Wellston, Jackson county, the acknowledged leader in the race for the Gubernatorial nomination and a brother-in-law of ex-Governor Foraker, says the Cincinnati platform will be adopted, with possibly a few additions, such as the free coinage of both gold and silver. Quite a strong contingent is here advocating a woman's suffrage plank, and the prospect is good for lively discussion. The matter of a prohibition plank excited much talk this morning, but it will not figure largely, as the principal Prohibitionists must be given assurance that their ticket will continue in the field, no matter what this convention does.

At a love feast held last night W. E. Farmer, of Texas, was cheered to the echo when he said: "If the Government can take seventy-five cents worth of silver, stamp it and make it worth 100 cents and that's what we propose to do."

Total Abstinence Societies.

Washington, August 5.—The annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Societies opened here this morning. There were about 300 delegates present. After an address by Cardinal Gibbons, Bishop Potter, the President, read his report on the state of the union, which showed that during the year gratifying progress has been made in the temperance cause. At noon the convention adjourned until 2 o'clock p m.

Upon reconvening the Committee on Credentials showed 178 regular delegates. The total membership is something over 53,000, exclusive of a large number of detached secret societies including those of New York, Chicago, Baltimore and Washington. Miss Frances E. Williard and Mrs. La Farler, representing the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, were offered seats in the convention as its fraternal guests, the former making a brief speech, which was interrupted by enthusiastic applause. The question of the employment of the national organizers was then discussed for two hours, and was finally referred to the committee.

The Ocean Record Lowered.

NEW YORK, August 5.—The White Star Line steamer Majestic, which left Havre July 19, arrived here this morning thus breaking the record from Queenstown to New York. Her time was 5 days, 18 hours and 8 minutes. The Majestic passed Roche,s Point at 2.12 a. m. Thursday, July 30, and arrived at Sandy Hook at 3.20 o'clock this morning. She beat the record by 57 minutes. Previous to the performance of the Majestic the record was held by the White Star steamship Teutonic. It was 8 days, 19 hours and 5 minutes.

Charged with Embezzlement.

Osceola Mills,, Pa., August 5.—William B. Hamilton, late teller of the Houtzdale bank, was arrested yesterday on oath of the recent owner of that bank for embezzlement and was held in the sum of $15,000 for his appearance at the Clearfield court. The trouble dates back to some time in May, at which time the bank was sold to William H. Dill.

Two Children Drowned

LEAMINGTON, Ont., August 5.—Hattie and Lillie Damms, aged 12 and 10 years respectively, were drowned here yesterday. They had been driven in a carriage by their brother to the wharf, where the horse became frightened and backed the vehicle over the wharf so that the two children tumbled into the water.

Don't Be caught.

by "cut prices." Dont buy spurious imitations of Dr Pierce's medicines at less than the regular prices, and think that you're saving money. You would be, if you could get the genuine guaranteed medicines in that way. But you can't. The genuine medicinef are sold only through regularly authorized agents, and always have been, are, and always will be sold at these prices:

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery (the remedy for all diseases arising from a torpid liver or impure blood), ... $1.00 per bottle.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription (for woman's weaknesses and ailments), ... $1.00 per bottle.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets (the original and best Liver Pills), ...25 cents per vial.

Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy . . . . . 50 cents per bottle

And they're worth that—they're worth more than that. They're the cheapest medicine you can buy, at any price, for they're guaranteed in every case to benefit or cure, or you have your money back. You pay only for the good you get. No other remedies of their kind are, or could be, sold on these terms.

Dealers not authorized to sell Dr. Pierce's genuine medicines may offer dilutions, imitations, or substitutes, at less than the prices given above. Beware of them.

The Work Done.

The work done by the Republican county convention on Tuesday can be said to be well done. The nomination of Mr. Aley for Jury Commissioner was a wise choice and a just tribute to the past record of that gentleman in filling the same office. In the selection of delegates by the State Convention as well as delegates to the Senatorial conference to elect delegates to the Constitutional Convention good judgment was displayed; but in the election of W. F. Reeder, Esq,, as county chairman, is where the Convention got in its big work.

Mr. Reeder is a gentleman of culture and ability; one easily approached and one who will do his best for the good of the party. It was under his leadership that the Republican party won the only signal victory it ever won in Centre county, that of four years ago. Mr. Reeder is a good organizer, an indefatiguable worker, a rising politician and one in every way fitted to carry on an aggressive campaign, such a one as it will be necessary to conduct in 1892. With such a man at the head the Republican party to a man can work for and expect to come off victors.

A Good Location.

A young lawyer of Bellefonte, who has more brains than practice, recently bethought himself to look up a location elsewhere, where lawyers were scarcer than here, work plentier and fees bigger and surer. Accordingly he concluded that Westmoreland county, inasmuch as it is such a large county, should be a good place to locate and, acting on his conclusion, he wrote to the prothonotary of old Westmoreland making inquiry about the prospects, etc., for a young and brilliant lawyer. The reply he received was somewhat brief but very suggestive, nevertheless. The prothonotary simply wrote on the back of the letter of inquiry about as follows:

"We have a population of over 100,000; 60 lawyers; 300 cases on the appearance docket; a poor house within two miles and an electric railway running very near it." Signed, etc.

It is needless to say that the young lawyer in question still boards in Bellefonte.

Outrages by White Caps.

CERRDO, W. Va., August 5.—Lincoln county, in the vicinity of Hamlin, has been terrorized recently by an organized gang of White Caps. On Sunday night the White Caps visited the home of John Tyree, a respectable farmer, took him out and beat him until he was insensible. A number of similar outrages have been committed. The victims are terrorized and afraid to make complaint. Some of the leading men of the county have been whipped by the ruffians.

"There are millions in it" said a druggist when asked about Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Price 25 cts.

For some time past I've been a rheumatic. I recently tried Salvation Oil which gave me almost instant relief. I sincerely recommend it as it has entirely cured me. JAMES GORDON, Balto, Md.

Information Wanted.

Information is desired of the whereabouts of Andrew Crighton, who left New York in May, and who has since written home from Patterson and Lewistown. His age is 25; weight 145; hight 5 feet 6 or 7 inches; full dark suit; had silver open-face watch and gold plated chain; square locket with picture of young man in it; had a heavy redish mustache. His letter indicated that his mind is impaired. Any person knowing of his whereabouts will please telegraph at once to Democrat and Sentinel, Lewistown, Pa. Exchanges please copy.

Good Looks.

Good looks are more than skin deep, depending upon a healthy condition of all the vital organs. If the Liver be inactive, you have a Bilious Look, if your stomach be disorded you have a Dyspeptic Look and if your Kidneys be affected you have a Pinched Look. Secure good health and you will have good looks. Electric Bitters is the great alterative and Tonic acts directly on these vital organs. Cures Pimples, Blotches, Boils, and gives a good complexion. Sold at C. M. Parrish's.

Wednesday's Game.

On Wednesday Robt. Garman,s nine had the Milesburg boys up to play ball when our boys saw them they said among themselves that this game is ours but such could not be the case as Milesburg took the lead and the scorce ran up. Robt Garman and George Graham were the battery for our boys and Garman soon won the hearts of the many young ladies who were present. Dave Kelley was fine on first base but he played a good game. George Brandon got sick and quit as he saw the last chance gone when Garman fanned windand the score was 19 to 9 in favor of Milesburg. "Come again and see us boys" is what the Milesburg club sang after the game. Wm. Green Jr (colored) one of our best ball tossers pitched for the visiting team. Our advice is for our boys to practice and then try it again.

LADIES

In delicate health, the result of irregularity of the natural functions, or of any of the ills peculiar to your sex, if you will write me, I will send you full information in regard to my cure, together with a few samples of the genuine testimonials I have received from thousands of thankful women. Do not fail to learn more of them at once. Dr. H. H. Jackson, 163, State Street, Chicago, Ill. jy 30—1y

Could Beat the Game.

A long time ago there was a good poker game in Atchison, and sharks came miles to beat it says the Globe of that city. It was a hard game, and the sharks usually got the worst of it. But once a Texas man dropped in and beat the game.

Playing in it was the then Mayor. A fine jackpot came up; the Mayor opened it for $25, the Texas man, who was dealing, raised it to $75.

The Mayor drew cards to aces, and made "aces up," the Texas man drew five cards, and made a straight.

It was a clear case of rob, but nobody squealed, and the Texas man took the money and hastened to the Union Depot.

In a few minutes he was arrested for vagrancy and fined $200. "We never let a stranger get away winner in those days," observed the citizen who told the story.

TAKE NO CHANCE

During the present heated term, surrounded by impure water and subject at any moment to epidemics, why risk your health, your happiness and probably your life, when a simple, pleasant and most affective preventative to human affliction, is at your command. Physicians everywhere, and nurses will promptly assure you of the advantage of good pure liquor, such as Klein's "Silver Age" or "Duquesne" pure ryes. Goods that are without a compeer in the market, and the boast and admiration of everyone testing them. Ask your druggist or dealer for them The "Silver Age" sells for $1.50 per full quart, and "Duquesne" for $1.25. If they do not keep it, send to the reliable wholesale liquor house of Max Klein, 82 Federal Street, Allegheny. You will find pure Guckenheimer, Finch, Overholt and Gibson Ryes, either at $1.00 per quart or six bottles for $5.00.

A complete catalogue and price list will be mailed on application.

—A goodly number of Bellefonte's colored citizens went to Williamsport to take part in the celebration of the anniversary of the emancipation proclamation.

—The young ladies black stocking base ball club, of Brooklyn, N. Y. will be in Clearfield to-morrow. This is the club they ought to bring to Bellefonte.

—There must be a heavy shipment of freight over the Pennsylvania railroad, judging froom the time it takes to get a consignment from Philadelphia to Bellefonte.

—A conference of the Ministers of the United Brethren church will convene in Bellefonte on Wednesday, September 16th. There will be about one hundred and fifty ministers and laymen present.

—Saturday, August 15th, the Evangelical congregation of Hublersburg will hold a festival at which all the good things possible to get will be served. The Pleasant Gap band will enliven the occasion with choice music.

—This does not seem to be very auspicious weather for picnics. Thus far it has not been possible for one Sunday school in Bellefonte to take their annual outing: and more than that, there is no telling how soon they can.

—In order to keep the potatoes from rotting in the ground they should be ploughed up and hauled into the barn floor; there spread out and left dry thoroughly, then put away and they will keep as nice as you please.

—Dear friend, don't hurt the editor with pistol or with gun; and ask him him if he said it, or expect that he will run. His threadbare linen duster may still his patches hide, but his muscles are developed and the Lord is on his side.

Children are just as liable to suffer from catarrh as grown people. The best and easiest applied remedy is Old Saul's Catarrh Cure.

The best reform in domestic life is without doubt the introductien of Dr. Bull's baby Syrup. Now no more laudanum need be given to babies.

Bellefonte Academy.

The eighty-fifth year of this institution will commence on Wednesday, the ninth of September, under most favorably auspices.

The building have been thoroughly remodeled, the school rooms are nicely papered, well lighted, well ventilated, provided with new furniture and comfortably heated.

INSTRUCTORS.

REV. J. P. HUGHES, principal, will have charge of the young men and boys in the main school room, teaching Natural Science Mathematics and .Book-Keeping.

MISS JULIA L. REED, so favorable known among us, will take charge of the young ladies in the South wing teaching Geography, History, Grammar, Rhetoric and Literature.

MR. JAMES R. HUGHES, will control the classical room, teaching French, German, Latin and Greek.

MISS ANNA C. VALENTINE, a lady of culture, and of seven years successful experience in teaching children, will have the care of the primary room, in the north wing. She will give instruction in Elementary English and Mathematics.

MISS EMMA S. HUGHES will teach Instrumental music, and class singing and conduct the calisthenic drills in the Calisthenic Hall, on the second floor of the north wing.

Members of the instrumental class which will be limited may have the advantage of the drills in class singing and calisthenic exercises whether they are pupils in the other school departments or not. Inducements are offered those who wish to pursue special or advance studies in literature science or modern languages. Pupils residing out of town can secure student's tickets at reduced rates on all railroad running into Bellefonte, and the recitations of such scholars will be arranged to suit the railroad schedule. 36-30-4t

HER MEMORY SLIPPED.

A myrtle avenue car, Brooklyn, had just turned off Fulton street when two men called to the conductor and waved their hands, and three or four boys whistled on their fingers, and a woman ran up the middle of the street waving her parasol; The car stopped, and she reached it to gasp:

"Dear me! but why didn't you see me way back there!"

"Thought you'd wait for the next car." replied the conductor.

"I can't wait a minute! I guess it will rain now before I get home."

"You won't get very wet with an umbrella."

"But I came away from home this morning and forgot to take in the clothes line, you know! Pleas tell the driver to put on a little extra speed.

Drink Buttermilk.

There would be more buttermilk than beer drank in summer time if people only knew the good qualities of the former drink. There is nothing in the line of simple drinks which exercises a more beneficial influence on the general health. It is at once food and medicine. The lactic acid it contains acts on the whole digestive system, while as food it has already undergone a semi-digestion in the churning to which it has been subjected. Physicians are every day increasing the amount of it that they prescribe for their patients, and in cases of liver and kidney disease it is invaluable. Instances are numerous of persons afflicted with Bright's disease living for many years in comparative comfort with no other medicine than a daily supply of buttermilk.

—A sixteen-year-old miss in Kansas has turned horse thief, and one a year younger in this state has become a high-way robber. Neither case furnishes a satisfactory solution to the growing problem: "What shall we do with our girls."

A feeble woman is restored to health and strength, by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. If you're overworked, "run-down," or debilitated, you need it. It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, and a soothing and strengthening nervine, imparting tone and vigor to the whole system. It's a legitimate medicine, too—carefully compounded by an experienced physician, and adapted to woman's delicate organization. For all the chronic weaknesses, functional derangements, and painful disorders peculiar to the sex, it is an unfailing remedy. It's because it is unfailing that it can be sold under a positive guarantee. If it fails to give satisfaction, in any case for which it's recommended, the money paid for it will be promptly returned.

It is a legitimate medicine—not a beverage. Contains no alcohol to inebriate; no syrup or sugar to sour or ferment in the stomach and cause distress. As peculiar in its marvelous, remedial results as in its composition.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines.

Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's.

Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered."

Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, has no other preparation ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Is Peculiar to Itself

Grand Army Meeting.

The unflagging interest shown in the annual reunions of the Grand Army of the Republic is highly creditable to the nation. The one which takes place in Detroit this week promises to be more largely attended than any one of the preceding twenty-four. It will probably be the greatest gathering of the boys in blue that has taken place since the war.

This is all the more gratifying because many persons have been led to believe that the Grand Army largely existed as a machine to secure pensions for its members. Thanks to a patriotism of a Republican Congress, practically all that can be expected in the way of pension legislation for a long time to come has already been granted. Hence it cannot be said that the hope of increased pensions inspires the veterans to gather at Detroit. They know that increased demands in that direction would not be wise.

It is true that service pensions were granted under a Democratic House and President to all the survivors of the Mexican War, though many of them were never within a thousand miles of the front, and a large proportion of them served in the Confederate Army. But that bill passed at the dictation of ex-Confederates in order to secure the passage of necessary legislation for the veterans of the last war. It is a manifest injustice that able bodied and even wealthy survivors of the short contest in Mexico should be drawing pensions, while the men who served five years in the late war are denied them. But the National Treasury cannot now stand the drain of another service pension bill, and the veterans will be wise not to demand such legislation.

The Grand Army was organized to inculcate loyalty and for fraternal and charitable purpose. It has been in existence twenty-five years. The work of securing pensions for disabled members has been a secondary matter. Its rules and regulations strictly forbid the use of the organization for partisan purposes. The principal object is stated in its constitution in these words:

The maintain true allegiance to the United States of America, based upon a paramount respect for and fidelity of its Constitution and laws; to discouentance whatever tends to weaken loyalty, to in surrection treason or rebellion, or in any manner impairs the efficiency and permanency of our free institutions, and to encourage the spread of universal liberty, equal rights and justice to all men.

That an organization with this aim has increased its members hip in a comparatively few years to nearly half a million men, with 8000 Posts scatted over the Union, is something for the nation to be proud of. It has expended $2,500,000 in ten years in relieving distress. The nation owes a debt of gratitude to the old veterans which it can never discharge. It may well rejoice in their annual gathering.

A RELIABLE ASSISTANT.

The poet and the almanac-maker agree that all seasons have their signs, but those of spring are most active and insistent. It is then that nature throws off the lethargy of winter and prepares to renew her bounties. It is then, also, that nature attempts to throw off the impurities that have lain dormant in the human system. This effort manifests itself in various ways—in the increased activity of old affections, in the appearance of boils, carbuncles and other eruptions, and in the various symptoms so familiar to those who have suffered. It is at this period that nature finds an active and a trustworthy assistant in S. S. S. which, in the work of purifying the blood and strengthening the system, has proven to be the most perfect spring medicine ever offered to the public.

A Wealth of Pictures.

Persons interested in the racing mania will find in Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper for the week ending August 8th a number of very striking pictures of the racing events of the year, taken from life. This issue also illustrates fully the recent drill of the New York Naval Reserve in connection with the Squadron of Evolution, and has a handsome full-page bird's eye view of the World's Fair buildings at Chicago. There is also a valuable illustrated article on the huckleberry industry. The leading editoral contribution relates to the copyright situation, and is furnished by Mr. Henry R. Elliot, who was active in securing the law. The narrative of the Alaska expedition is continued.

THE GRANGERS' 18th Annual Interstate Picnic Exhibition under the sanction of the National and State Granges of the United States, will open at Williams' Grove, Cumberland county, Pa., on Monday, August 14th, and continue six days. Five thousand people will encamp on the grounds. Twenty-five acres of ground will be covered with exhibits. The P. R. R. and all its branches will sell low rate excursion tickets during the entire week. Round trip tickets good for eight days from—Bellefonte Via L. & T. Branch, $4.21 For full information, address. R. H. Thomas, Mechanicsburg, Pa.

Marriage Licenses.

Calvin Corl and Blanche Jordan, both of State College.

Lawrence S. Williams and Mary Thomas, both of Philipsburg, Pa.

Lowry Shope, of Milesburg. and Ellen Taylor, of Buffalo Run.

Charles Watson and Eva McGinley, both of Milesburg, Pa.

—The Ladies Mite Society of the Howard Evangelical Church will hold an Ice Cream Festival for the benefit of the Church in the School House yard, on Saturday Aug. 15th 1891, both afternoon and evening. There will be a guess cake at 5 cents a guess. A Post Office will be had, also a candy booth at which there will be many fancy and useful articles sold. The Howard Citizens Cornet Band will be present to delight all with their music. Choice refreshments can be had on the ground. All are cordially invited to attend.

Fate in a Teacup.

Here are a few old superstitions regarding the ever-friendly cup that cheers: If while the tea is being made and the lid, which has been removed to pour in the water, is forgotten, it is a sure sign that some one will "drop into tea."

If a single person happens to have two spoons in his or her saucer, it is a prediction that the fortunate (or unfortunate?) drinker of that particular cup will be married within a year from that date.

If you put cream in your cup before the sugar it will "cross your love," so be very careful.

If a tea stalk floats in the cup, it is called a "beau," and when this is seen unmarried women should stir their tea very quickly round and round and round, and then hold the spoon upright in the centre of the cup. If the "beau" is attracted to the spoon and clings to it, he will be sure to call very shortly, if not that same evening, but if the stalk goes to the side of the cup he will not come.

Examine the tea leaves in your cup if you are plebeian enough to boil your tea instead of drawing it in the refined and dainty fashion, for a lot of leaves mean money and fortune.

If you want to know how many years will elapse before you may expect to be married, balance your spoon on the edge of your cup, first noting that it is perfectly dry, fill another spoon partly with tea, and holding it above the balanced spoon, let the drops of tea gather to the tip of the spoon and gently fall into the bowl of the one below. Count the drops—each one stands for a year.

It is a sign of fair weather if the cluster of small air bubbles formed by the sugar collect and remain in the center of the cup. If they rush to the sides it will surely rain before night.

When the toast is made, three or four thin slices of bread must be cut the whole length of the loaf, and placed one over the other. This done, they must all be cut in half with one sweep of the knife. If this is done by a young woman, and the slices are not severed clean through to the plate, she will not be married within the year; if the bread parts in two even heaps, she might as well order her trousseau. On no account must she take the last piece of toast or bread on the plate, unless she wishes to be an old maid.

Testing Employees.

Employes of the motive power department of the Pennsylvania system are now being examined for the purpose of ascertaining whether they are afflicted with color blindness. These examinations take place every two years and have been in progress for some time. The modus operandi of the examination is well known to the majority of railroaders. Various colored yarns are flashed before the eyes of the examined, and they are required to distinguish colors rapidly. The eyes are also examined by specialists. Two absolute requisites for trainmen are good eyesight and good hearing, and the Pennsylvania insures the former by a course of rigid tests. Those failing to pass a satisfactory examination are given work in some other department.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

Here is a most excellent suggestion to rich people, not only of our community but all over the United States, who ride on passes and make the poor people pay for them. They might at least make up some what in this way. I hope a word to the wise is sufficient.

"President Carnot travels free on the French railroads and after his journey has his secretary foot up what the expense of the trip would have been if paid for, and then hands that sum over as a gratuity to be distributed among the subordinates and poorest paid servants of the railroads."

A Monster Clock.

Philadelphia is about to add another "wonder" to the catalogue. The new "wonder is a clock, which will pe placed in the tower of a public building now in course of erection. The dial of this colossial time piece is to be 25 feet in diameter and the distance from the centre of the dial 351 feet. The bell is to weigh between 20,000 and 25,000 pounds. The minute hand is to be 12 feet, and the hour hand is to be 9 feet in length, while the Roman figures on the dial will measure 2 feet 8 inches.

Restorative Wine.

If you are weak and suffering from general debility, you should use Speer's Port Grape Wine; it will purify your blood, restore digestion and make you feel like a younger person, in fact it makes you new blood. Speer's vineyards are planted on brown stone shale rock soil containing iron. There is over two miles of carriage drives under grape arbors in his vineyards. For sale by druggists.

—There were four fatal accidents in the vicinity of Greensburg on Saturday. David B. Weaver one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens in the county, was run down by the Day Express east and instantly killed. The old man was horribly mutilated. He was 83 years of age. Geo. W. Botorf, a native of St. Louis, but latterly of Benore, Centre Co, Pa., was struck by a frieght engine west of Greensburg and instantly killed. He was aged about 30 years. John Decker, a Pennsylvania breakman, fell from his train at Irwin and sustained injuries from which he will die. Jerome Muller, of Hillside, attemped to board a freight train when he fell to the ground. His skull was fractured and he was otherwise painfully injured.

—Big Bear, a full blooded Indian was a visitor to our town on Sunday, the guest of A. W. Valentine. Big Bear says his Grand Father was born near Warriors Mark in Huntingdon county, and who is still living at the age of 114 years. Big Bear has a position in the Indian Territory under the U. S. Government. He has made many visits to Penna., taking a deep interest in the training of Indian boys and girls at the Schools at Carlisle. He gave quite an entertaining talk to the M. E. and U. B. S. S., on Sunday morning and afternoon; being a man of more than ordinary intelligence. He was accompanied by his son who is called little Big Bear.—McVeytown Journal.

—Mr. Daniel Garman has covered High street, in front of his hotel, over with crushed limestone. It will be rolled solid and ere long it is believed will be almost as good as the concrete or asphalt paving. It would be a good idea for the borough to cover all the streets in town.

The Best Remedy in this world, says J. Hofherr of Syracuse, N. Y., is Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son, who was partially paralyzed three years ago and attacked by fits, has not had any symptoms of them since he took one bottle of the remedy. I most heartily thank for it.

Nervous Prostration, Sleeplessness, and Weakness.

WEST BROUGHTON, Quebec, Oct. 1, '90.

The Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic I ordered was for a young lady of my household, who was almost useless to herself and others, owing to nervous prostration, sleeplessness, weakness, &c., &c. To-day there is quite a change. The young person is much better, stronger, and less nervous. She will continue to use your medicine. I think it is very good.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Her Last Work.

A cablegram announces that Amelie Rives has sailed for the United States where she will arrive soon after the appearance of her latest novel in the August number of the Cosmopolitan. After nearly two years of silence the new story of Miss Rives will be received with the greatest interest by those who enjoyed her earlier work. Married, travelled and in every way natured, her latest production is said to be worthy of the talent which gave such great promise. The scene is laid in Paris where the author has been living for two years, and the heroine is a Virginia girl who is studying music abroad with a negro servant for a chapezone. The story has been illustrated by Kate Greatorex, one of the most promising of American painters in Paris, and a charming portrait of Miss Rives is the frontispiece of the magazine.

Two papers in this number which will be read with great interest by journalists, are those by Valerian Gribayedoff—who is called "the father of pictorial journalism"—and "The Woman's Press Club of New York" by Fannie Aymar Matthews. Gribayedoff has discussed artistically and practically the question of the illustration of the daily newspaper in a way to afford information to all who are interested in journalism.

Anent the baccarat scandal, Gen. Adam Badeau of Grant's staff, who was afterwards Secretary of Legation in London and saw much of the English aristocracy, writes an article on "Gambling in High Life." "The Duckeries", by Pelham-Clinton, is another article which will please those who take an interest in the great country houses of England. Thomas A. Janvies, who is always delightful with his pen, gives a quaint sketch of the old ducal town of Uzes. To those interested in education, President Gilman of the John Hopkins furnishes food for thought in an article on this great southern university.

The cartoons which have been made of Bismarck, furnish a subject for Murat Halstead, reproductions of many of the most noted cartoons, illustrating the paper. There is an article on Placer Mining with instantaneous photographs, and one on the Court Jesters of England by Miss Esther Singleton, who is making a reputation as a graceful writer, besides the usual departments by Edward Everett Hale, Brander Matthews, etc.

Calypso or Penelope?

By Edward S. Van Zile.

Author of "Wanted, a Sensation," "The Last of the Van Slacks," "A Magnetic Man," etc., etc.

[Copyright 1891, by The United Press.]

CHAPTER I.

A winter day was drawing to a close. Before the glowing ashes of a fire that lately crackled in a cheerful way sat two young men. In the shadows of the ember-lighted room could be seen the outlines of a desk; while the ghosts of chairs and divans, books and pictures, banjoes, tennis-racquets, cricket-suits and curios peered through the dimness and grew distinct or faded out of sight as the fickle fire flashed up or died away. Heavy curtains hung at each end of the apartment and shut out what little light the fading day vouchsafed.

Save for the slight death-murmurs made by the expiring fire there had been silence in the room for some time. The two collegians, one of whom puffed a pipe in a self-absorbed manner, formed a marked contrast to each other even in the uncertain light. As a little tongue of flame flashed up and threw a momentary glow upon the face of him who watched the smoke curl upward from his meerschaum, a countenance of striking beauty was revealed. Dark, curly hair framed a pale, clean-cut face from which eyes that seemed black in contrast gazed brightly forth. That he was fond of picturesque clothes was proved by the scarlet smoking-jacket that so well became his Oriental type. He was of medium height, if his lounging attitude permitted one to estimate his figure's size. He was about twenty years of age, but something in his face, it was hard to tell just what, made him look somewhat older.

His companion was a very different style of man. He was a broad-shouldered fellow, at least six feet tall, with a homely, strong countenance, almost too youthful to conform with his manly stature. His nose was large, his hair straight and coarse, his eyes too piercing to be pleasing, while his large mouth, firm but unsymmetrical in outline, told of a strong will and thorough self-control. He had been watching his room-mate closely for awhile. Finally he said:

"You can't serve both God and Mammon, old man. You have come to the parting of the high-ways. What is your choice?"

The smoker removed his pipe from his mouth, stirred impatiently in his chair and exclaimed, rather petulantly:

"You make me weary, Jack. You take everything so seriously. You were in the prime of life when you were born and have been growing old ever since. You have just about as much sympathy with youth as our venerable Prex—and still you are a year younger than I am. Why can't you leave me alone? Don't I get enough preaching in chapel?"

Jack Arnold arose and threw a few pieces of wood upon the grate. A crackling laugh seemed to indicate the joy felt by the little fire over its narrow escape from extinction. Resuming himself the long-legged athlete quietly remarked:

"You do me an injustice, Hal. My blood is not water nor my heart a stone. You know that what I say is the result of my affection for you. I see you are bringing sorrow on yourself and others. I could never forgive myself if I did not warn you that you cannot defy society and still retain the respect of those whose regard is worth having."

"You talk like a prig. How do I defy society? Am I different from other men of my age, in college or out? Is it not better to sow your wild oats before you get so old that you become the worst of all things—a gray-haired rake? No, Jack, I want to know something of life outside of books before I settle down to law under my father's anxious eye. Now's my chance, and I shall make the most of it. 'Rather fifty years of Europe,' carpe diem,' and all the rest of it. The poets have been the wisest men on earth, and—"

"Stop right there, Hal," exclaimed the tall youth rising and lighting a lamp that stood upon the desk behind him. "You are treating this matter as you always do, in a flippant and one-sided way. You know that I have never said one word against your sowing as large a crop of wild oats as you please. Perhaps, as you say, it is better for you to have your fling while you are young. What I object to, as you well know, is that you should make love to an honest girl while having an affair with a woman upon whom the shadow of suspicion rests."

Harlan Otis, familiarly called "Hal," knocked the ashes from his pipe and showed a handsome set of teeth as he smiled cynically.

"You take a great deal for granted, Jack. Who says I am making love to 'an honest girl?' Who says I am having an affair with 'a woman upon whom the shadow of suspicion rests?' I thought you gave no ear to gossip, old man. That is your boast, at least."

John Arnold drew himself up to his full height, leaned against the desk, folded his arms and gazed sternly at his chum.

"Again you are unjust, Hal. I have not roomed with you for three years without knowing you pretty well. Gossip is always firing at the target of truth and sometimes hits the bulls-eye. In your case it has rung the bell. What is only surmise on the part of a great many people I know to be a fact. You are paying a double role. What your object is I do not comprehend. What the end will be I can easily prophesy."

Harlan Otis arose, crossed the room and threw himself upon a divan. His face was flushed. Perhaps the fire had grown too hot. Turning toward his friend he smiled again, this time gently.

"Come, Jack, let's change the subject. How goes the nine? How are the new men doing in the Gym?"

Arnold was annoyed. Drawing a chair toward the divan, he seated himself, took his room-mate's hand and said earnestly:

"My dear old boy, don't snub me this way. I am trying to do you a kindness and you treat me as though I were impertinent and rude. You are like an ostrich with its head in the sand. You seem blind to the fact that your present course is attracting wide attention, that you will surely lose your friends and perhaps your degree. Now, take my advice. Choose between Calypso and Penelope. Mind you, I do not counsel you which to take. But give up this life of deceit; be Don Juan, if you will, or a square man winning a good girl's heart. You can't be both with all your cleverness. Wait a moment; I know what is in your mind. You think yourself a genius. Sometimes I believe you are. But the old idea that genius is beyond and above the laws that govern other men is one of the many fallacies exploded in recent years. Longfellow always wore clean cuffs, Tennyson is a quiet, domestic man and their works will live as long as those of Burns and Byron."

Harlan Otis had withdrawn his hand from the grasp of Arnold.

"That's a long speech for you, Jack," he said satirically. "Permit me to refill my pipe. You have placed my nerves under a great strain."

Arising he packed his meerschaum, struck a match, puffed the tobacco into a glow and again reclined upon the sofa.

"Now, look here, John Arnold," he began in measured tones, "you and I have been good friends for some years. You're the only man in college I could have endured as a chum. But I must say right here, with all the emphasis that a 'genius' can bring to bear, that I never want you to refer to this matter again. You may be right; you may be wrong. You know it is said that there is only one vice that is not kindly received by youth and that is advice. Bear this in mind and let me go my way. You ask me to choose between Alice Inman and Mrs. Barr. I refuse." Here he sprang from the divan, thrust his pipe upon the desk and, with his dark eyes flashing, cried: "You say your friendship for me makes this demand. You knew, John Arnold, that that is false. You yourself love Alice Inman."

"God help me—that is so. And she loves you!"

Arnold's face was buried in the sofa and the sob of a strong man echoed weirdly through the room.

At that moment the college bell rang out the summons to evening prayer.

CHAPTER II.

It was a sharp, crisp night. The moon shone down upon a snow-clad land and its silvery beams scintillated in dazzling splendor from the ice-covered branches of the ancient trees that lined the streets of that fair New England town. The college was astir with life. In front of Gymnasium Hall barouche-sleighs came and went, depositing their loads of fur-wrapped maidens and cape-coated youths. The last college cotillon of the season was to be danced and across the white expanse of campus echoed the music of a waltz that thrilled the soul of "the reading man" as he pored over his books in his lonely room and envied the happier fate of his more prosperous classmates. For he who dances must pay the fiddler and if your purse is not fat you must stick to your books. After all, you are here to study, not to flirt, and with this thought in your mind, oh, scholar, return to your classic tomes. Perhaps in the years to come you will pluck from the tree of life fruit more precious than the ephemeral favors of the german.

But, on with the dance! The scene before us is one that stirs the blood of him who finds in the beauty of woman and the strength and grace of well-groomed men the fairest products of this strange world. Behold a large and lofty hall bedecked with flowers and gay with the smiles of youth. Our pulses throb with the rythm of the waltz; white arms and swan-like necks, bright eyes and ruby lips whirl by us in a dream of love and joy. Are you reading of Chloe and other ancient belles in your distant room, poor boy? Come forth into the wintry night and peep through the windows of the Hall. Did Alcibiades or Horace, Theocritus or Virgil gaze in the olden days upon lovelier forms or fairer faces than now enchant the senses of your colleagues? Let the Venus of Milo reign if she will in the realm of art; as for us, one hour of flesh and blood is worth a kalpa of marmorean joys. Back to your books, then, you who lead your class. Thrill, if you can, with the sculptured stones of ancient verse. Leave us to seize from the merry present the pleasures that pertain to the fever of life and the buoyancy of youth.

Harlan Otis had come late to the dance. If he looked fascinating when robed in a scarlet smoking-jacket he was irresistible in evening dress. "He's a symphony in black and white," a Boston girl had remarked as he entered the ball-room. "Perhaps—but he's out of tune," returned her partner, who had noted the scowl on the picturesque Junior's brow.

The fact was that Otis was annoyed by several things. In the first place, the scene before him was not in harmony with his present state of mind. He had just come from a drawing-room considered dangerous ground by the stately matrons who sat in solemn grandeur at the upper end of the ball-room, dispensing favors and indulging in more or less ill-natured gossip. The picture of a dark-haired, blue-eyed woman, with the love-light on her clean-cut face was before him. The warm clasp of her hand still thrilled him. The odor of violets, always worn at her waist, lingered with him yet. He could hear her velvet voice as she urged him to give to the woman who loved him best the evening hours. He had torn himself away from all this—for what?

In the coat room he had met with a most unpleasant episode.

"She looks like a dream to-night, Hal," remarked a class-mate, referring, as the assembled students well knew, to Alice Inman.

"But she's a reality to John Arnold," replied a malicious voice.

Alice Inman was to dance the cotillon with his chum and Harlan Otis deeply felt the sarcasm the last speaker had thrown out. He answered not, but hurried onward toward the dancing-room. Men of his temperament make bitter enemies as they do warm friends and he knew that many of his colleagues would be glad to see him disgraced. The rivalry between John Arnold and himself for the smiles of Alice Inman had become so apparent to all on-lookers that the slightest advantage gained by either suitor formed a topic for conversation in a community rather narrow in its lines.

For that night's german Harlan Otis had no partner, and, after paying his devoirs to the matrons, he took his place among the "stags." "She is, indeed a dream," he said to himself, as his eyes rested upon Alice Inman. Instantly the vision of a dark-haired woman dressed in black, with violets at her waist, vanished from his mind. He saw only a gentle, girlish face, crowned by a wealth of auburn hair; a well-rounded, supple figure, attired in clinging white. He felt a pang of jealousy as the orchestra resumed the waltz and John Arnold, leader for the night, whirled away in rythmic grace with the girl he loved in vain. Suddenly the athlete stays his steps, claps his hands and at the favor table the eight dancers meet. Straight toward Harlan Otis walks Alice Inman. Handing him some trifling toy, she says, as they join in the waltz:

"You were rather late—but you have my first favor."

"Thank you," he answers. "I will keep it for all time."

"Always talking nonsense. I wish you would once be honest—just for a change."

Thus she whispers and her breath is on his cheek. He holds her a little closer to him, but, hark, the fatal signal comes and he has left her at her seat.

Perhaps John Arnold noticed the flush upon her cheeks as he rejoined his partner. At all events his homely face was jaunty than its wont and for a moment he forgot his duties as director of the dance.

Mercurial, impressionable, Harlan Otis was torn by conflicting inclinations as he resumed his seat at the end of the room.

Two women can love one man; can one man love two women? was the question in his mind. His better nature urged him toward the girl who had just asked him to be honest; force of habit and the subtle fascination of a woman of the world inclined him to be faithful to her whose thrilling voice still echoed in his ears with words of love. Had John Arnold told the truth? Must he, indeed, make choice at once between Calypso and Penelope? It seemed so. He glanced toward Alice Inman. By her side sat his dearest enemy, the youth whose malicious remark had annoyed him in the coat-room.

"Is it not a pity," the young man was saying to Miss Inman, "that such a good fellow as Hal Otis should not be better balanced?"

"I don't know what you mean," returned Alice coldly.

"Well, for instance, he dined with Mrs. Barr to-night and then came straight here. I think it is a shame."

A slight pallor appeared on the girl's face for an instant, but she managed to remark in a conventional way:

"I see that your partner is deserted, Mr. Rogers. I think you had better go to her."

In her heart she knew that Rogers had told the truth about Harlan Otis but she despised him for his unmanly attempt to stab a colleague in the back. Nevertheless, the blow had struck home and when Otis came to claim her for the second intermission she received him coldly. He did not notice, however, the constraint in her manner for, with his usual impetuosity, he had come to an important decision and longed only to find some corner where he could talk to Alice in comparative seclusion. After they had seated themselves in a remote nook in the hall-way he said:

"Early in the evening you asked me, Alice, why I would not be honest—just for a change. After our Yankee fashion, let me return your question with another. Will you let me be?"

She shrank from him, and pulled her white wrap closer across her shoulders, as though the draught had chilled her.

"You do not answer. Silence, they say, gives consent. Alice, I love you. I want you to be my wife."

She sprang up quickly as he attempted to take her hand. Her face was very pale and the shadow of tears was in her eyes. In her veins flowed the blood of Puritan ancestors, and, though her heart was breaking, pride showed itself in every movement, in every feature.

"Mr. Otis, you have no right to speak to me in this way. You have been unkind. Please take me back to the ball-room."

"But Alice," he cried, springing up, "you do not understand. I—"

"I understand too much," she said sadly. "Come."

She placed her arm in his. He detained her for an instant.

"You don't know what you've done," he whispered hoarsely. Then, almost fiercely: "Tell me—are you engaged to John Arnold?"

"No," she answered simply. "Come."

The moon had fallen toward the western horizon as Harlan Otis stumbled through the snow toward college. His brain was in a whirl and a heavy hand seemed to clutch his heart. The silent beauty of the night calmed not the fever that made his pulses beat fast and his cheeks burn. Behind him the lights of the ball-room shone through the darkening night and the joyous music of the dance vibrated on the crisp, dry air.

Reaching his parlor, the young man threw a few sticks of wood upon the smouldering fire, lighted a lamp, cast off his overcoat and seated himself at the desk. He tried to write, but his nerves were too unstrung to make the effort successful. Impatiently he arose and filled his pipe. Then as he puffed himself into a quieter frame of mind he penned the following note:

"My Dear Rhoda:

The sleighing is glorious. If you wish to drive with me to-morrow afternoon, I will call for you about three.

Lovingly yours,

Harry.

CHAPTER III.

There was a sound of revelry by night, and a score of jolly dogs made merry over punch, tobacco, song and story. Harlan Otis; Ned Rogers; Jack Arnold, the abstemious; little Bob Vincent, the banjo-expert, comedian and joker; Dick Dorlon, called familiarly "Dolly," a large, pudgy youth, always giggling at Bob Vincent's gambols; Arthur Hartington, a pale, blond, dissipated-looking fellow, exquisitely dressed and blasé in manner; and a dozen others had gathered at midnight in Dorlon's room to celebrate his attainment of his majority. It was now two o'clock and the flushed faces of several of the crowd indicated that Dolly's birthday-party would soon become literally a howling success. Arnold, who neither drank nor smoked, saw that the bout was likely to end in a scene of disorder, so, with a few words to his host, he made his escape, beckoning to his chum as he left the room.

"Don't go, Hal," cried Bob Vincent, filling a glass with punch and handing it to Otis. "Jack can go by-bye if he wants to, but as for us,

'We won't go home until morning.
We won't go home until morning.
We won't go home until morning.
'Til daylight doth appear.'"

This chorus was taken up by the jovial throng and two hundred feet away a restless professor tossed nervously on his bed as he heard the flippant song and recalled the days—or, rather, nights—when he, too, could fight the candle at both ends and rejoice to see it burn.

"I've got a new song for you, boys!" cried Vincent, seizing his banjo and gazing quizzically at their host. Here it goes. Mark the chorus, now:

"Oh, here's to our host, dear Dolly,
Who has made us all quite jolly
On a fine rum punch by golly;
Dear Dolly, Dolly, Dolly!

CHORUS.

Oh, let the glasses clink,
As dear Dolly's praises drink,
And of scrip have no stint,
We will never reach a wink."

There were five more verses, equally light in texture, but each was received with more enthusiasm than the predecessor.

Harlan Otis had indulged in more punch than his highly-strung system could stand, and his face was flushed with excitement, while his dark eyes glowed feverishly. "Let's have some poker," he cried with little Bob's song had come to an end and Dolly Dorlon had recovered from a fit of hysterical laughter.

"Show your cards and double or quits (hic)!" cried a timid youth who had been asleep on a sofa and was aroused by the word "poker."

"Oh go to bed, Mart. You don't know the color of cards from a hole in the wall," remarked Bob Vincent, shying a water-cracker at the tousled head of the bleary-eyed Sophomore.

"Bet you I do. Show you a cold——cold——(hic)." And S. Martin Severance, as he signed himself when he was sober, fell back upon the pillow with a meaningless smile upon his face. His eyes closed and in an instant he was unconscious of the suggestive fact that card tables were being brought forth from odd corners while the rattle of ivory cubs echoed pokerishly through the room.

Harlan Otis, Bob Vincent, Ned Rogers and Arthur Hartington made one of the quartettes. Three tables were soon in full blast, while those who were either too sleepy or too indifferent to join in the great American game either wandered off wearily to their own rooms or drowsily watched the play of their less punch-penetrated comrades.

Otis, who was the cleverest player in the room, was not in good form. From the very first he lost steadily while Ned Rogers, a thin, cadaverous, sharp-eyed youth, who detested his handsome vis-a-vis, raked in the chips with never-varying success.

"Hand me a glass of punch," remarked Otis peremptorily to a tired, fogy-looking Freshman who felt honored at the chance given him to witness the dissipations of upper classmen.

Harlan Otis, as you have discovered by this time, was a young man who lived wholly in the present. He had been born with a silver spoon in his mouth—a table-spoon, large size—and had been early taught that the earth and the fullness thereof were his. When he had entered college the incense of flattery had been burned at his altar but, in spite of it all, he had not been spoiled. As time went on, however, he had insensibly imbibed the notion that whatever he desired must, of necessity, come to him. The refusal of Alice Inman to be his wife had, in its final analysis, been more of a surprise than a calamity to him. As we have seen, he had at once written to Mrs. Barr and the outcome of this step had been delightful. He had passed an afternoon and evening filled with all that his soul could ask and had come to Dorlon's "punch" in a self-satisfied frame of mind.

At three o'clock in the morning he found himself out of touch with the world. He knew that he had drunk too much rum, and the conviction offended his manhood. Therefore, he ordered another glass of punch. Worse than this, the man of all men that he most despised was beating him in a game in which he excelled. Our hero—excuse the old-fashioned expression—grew more heated as he reviewed the wrongs that fate had done him. His cheeks became still redder and his eyes flashed fire. Lighting a cigarette he plunged recklessly on a jack pot. The result was disastrous. Ned Rogers captured the stake.

"Lucky in love; unlucky at cards," quoted the winner of the chips.

"What do you mean?" asked Otis, sharply, glaring at Rogers.

"Oh, nothing. I did not refer to you."

"Perhaps," drawled Arthur Hartington, "you were giving me a shot. It didn't hit the mark, don't you know? I used to be lucky enough in love, but that was long before the war."

"Jackass," muttered Otis under his breath as he glanced over his hand and saw that he held three aces. "Give me two cards," he said to Bob Vincent, the dealer.

Vincent and Hartington were too weak to stay in. The contest arose between Otis and Rogers.

"Raise you five dollars," remarked our hero as he glanced over his hand and saw that he held two kings and three aces.

"See you five and raise you five," returned Rogers.

And so the betting went forward, until a hundred dollars were at stake.

"Look here, Rogers," said Otis, taking a sip of punch, "I hold a strong hand and the stake is high. I can afford to lose. I don't think that you can. I am willing to call the bets off, for I know that you can't win."

Rogers' face became crimson. His small eyes seemed to throw out gleams of fire.

"Do you mean to insult me?" he cried. "You are as mean a cur at cards as you are with women." Thereupon he placed upon the table three queens and two jacks.

Ghastly pale, Harlan Otis calmly laid down the winning hand. Then, grasping his half-emptied glass of punch, he threw the contents into the face of Ned Rogers.

Chaos reigned for a moment. Bob Vincent had seized Otis around the waist and Arthur Hartington held Rogers in check.

"You shall answer for this," hissed the latter.

"Pistols and coffee for four at sunrise," cried Bob Vincent, laughing.

"Pocket the boodle," said Arthur Hartington to Otis. "You won the stake."

"Stop right here," commanded a tall, imposing Senior, advancing from a neighboring table. "Go to your room, Rogers. I'm ashamed of you, Otis. It's about time you learned how much punch you can stand."

A few moments later Harlan Otis found himself beneath the star-studded sky. The moon had long since set and the deep darkness that precedes dawn covered the land.

The young collegian's mind was in a whirl. Punch, tobacco-smoke and the excitement of play had overcome his equilibrium. He had only one desire. He must see Rhoda Barr. Indistinctly he felt that the longing was absurd, that his own room was the place for him to seek. Nevertheless he hurried onward down the broad walk, past the campus and Gymnasium Hall, forward, forward till he found himself in the business centre of the town. The lights in a saloon, not unknown to him, attracted his attention. He entered the place and drank a stiff glass of vile whiskey. it was a fatal step. What little prudence and common-sense remained to him was destroyed when the rum punch and raw rye made an allied attack on the tissues of his brain. A few moments later he stood before a small, two-storied house surrounded by leafless trees. Mechanically he picked up a piece of ice and threw it against the upper front windows. With difficulty he prevented himself from falling after this effort.

Pretty soon one of the windows was raised and a soft voice falteringly asked:

"Who's there?"

"It's Harry, Rhoda. Come down to me. I'm in trouble."

"You reckless boy! What do you mean? Go back to college. I can not come down."

"You say you love me. If you do you will not desert me. Oh, Rhoda, please let me in. I am sick of all the world but you."

"Wait a minute. I'll be down."

He leaned against a tree, hardly conscious where he was. The cold, sharp wind whistled through the branches above him and the stars twinkled humorously as though amused at his queer plight.

Suddenly the door of the house opened and he caught a glimpse of a pale, startled face, a slender figure robed in a dressing-gown of some bright color, and heard a voice saying:

"Come, Harry. You have put me to a cruel test."

She took his hand and led him to the parlor. Helping him off with his overcoat after she had lighted the gas, she made him lie down upon a sofa. In an instant he was asleep. Pushing back his hair with gentle hands, she kissed his forehead and then softly stole upstairs.

CHAPTER IV.

Miss Mary Rhoda Inman was a precocious girl. It was necessary to be in her society but a few moments before you found it out. He impressed the fact upon you; just how he did it was hard to say. He never talked much, but when he made a remark—about the weather, for instance,—you felt at once that a powerful brain had begotten the proposition he advanced. Knowing, as you did, that he was the proprietor of a newspaper, the president of a bank, an ex-congressman, once Minister to Portugal and the leader of his political party in the State, you could not find it in you to contradict him when he asserted that we were sure to have rain within the next twenty-four hours. The fact that the National Weather Bureau predicted fair weather for the immediate future had not the least significance. The Hon. John Tupper Inman prophesied rain; therefore, it was sure to rain.

The great man's personal appearance added to the prestige his reputation gave to his remarks. He was tall, fleshy, imposing; and in his eye shone the light of a self-confidence fully in keeping with his wonderful achievements.

You see Mr. Inman was what is generally known as a self-made man. That is, he had left school when he was fourteen years of age and had been the architect of his own fortune. Naturally he had great respect for a boy who could begin his life-work on nothing and find himself worth half a million dollars at the age of fifty. He was broad-minded enough, however, to give some of the credit for his success to his ancestors and had even gone so far as to put up the money for an Inman book of genealogy. A fine engraving of the Hon. John Tupper Inman occupied the frontis-piece of this valuable tome.

In public life Alice Inman's father had been strikingly successful. He possessed in abundance those qualities that impress the unthinking in a land where the people assume to rule. He was not a great orator, but he had a way of saying trite things in a wise manner that carried conviction with it. He possessed a certain shrewdness that enabled him to touch the weak points of other men in an effective way, and his money enabled him to oil the political machine when it creaked too harshly.

He was fond of flattery, and during his diplomatic career at Lisbon he had been charmed by the incense burned at his shrine by the stately Portuguese. When he returned to his native land he issued a general order to the effect that his newspaper should never again attack the monarchial system of the Old World. Gradually this fact had leaked out, and at the time our story begins the Hon. John Tupper Inman was under a political cloud. The rumor had gone forth that he had abandoned the faith of his forefathers and no longer believed in the ability of the people to rule themselves.

So much for Inman's public status. As a domestic man his record was as white as the driven snow. When his wife had died in giving birth to his only child he had, in a dignified way, shed the requisite number of tears. On his departure for Portugal he had left his sister in charge of his daughter, with a fat bank deposit to draw against for the growing maiden's support and education. When he returned from the Court of Lisbon he found that his daughter had become a handsome, self-willed girl, more like her mother in appearance and disposition than her father relished.

Nevertheless, the great man's being centered itself upon his daughter and from that time forth he devoted his life to her happiness. Her popularity in society pleased him, but there was one antipathy that his temperament could not uproot. He hated a college student. His own success both in politics and business had been won in spite of the fact that he had never read Homer nor Horace and did not know the difference between a parallelogram and a logarithm.

After the college german referred to in the second chapter of this history, the Hon. John Tupper Inman observed a change in his daughter. She was paler than her wont and her conversation was less sprightly than of yore. The father's quick eye noted the change, but experience had taught him that in dealing with his daughter more diplomacy was needed than when he had manipulated the existing treaty between this country and the court of Lisbon. For some days, therefore, he had eyed her cautiously but had refrained from asking her why her red cheeks had grown pale, her eyes dim and her white, clean-cut hand unsteady. Perhaps he suspected the truth; but, if he did, he gave her no opportunity to realize this. He maintained his usual distant, reserved, pompous manner and served the soup and carved the roast as though he were not annoyed by his waning popularity and his daughter's apparent fondness for the friendship of undergraduates.

One day his patience was rewarded. His sister, a sharp-featured old maid, very different in physical make-up from her brother, remarked:

"Cook is in a very bad way, John. She can hardly do her work. I think you had better have Doctor Moore come down and see her."

"Yes, do, papa," added Alice, pouring out the coffee at the head of the table. "Nora looks very sick."

On the way to his office that afternoon John Tupper Inman stopped at the sanctum of his medical adviser.

"Look here, Moore," he remarked to a wise-looking little man of science, "my daughter and cook are ill. I want you to go up to the house ostensibly to prescribe for the cook. While you are there cast your eye over Alice and tell me what's the matter with her. I fear she is in a bad way."

Two hours later Charles Edgar Moore, M.D., thrust his insignificant person into the presence of the Hon. John Tupper Inman, bank president, editor and worried father.

"Your cook is all right," remarked the manipulator of lotions, "but your daughter has malaria."

When a physician does not know what is the matter with you he diagnoses your case as malaria. If you die in a mysterious way he asserts that you have passed away from heart failure. There is, indeed, a wide lee-way for the man who holds a medical diploma.

"What shall I do—for my daughter?" asked John Tupper Inman anxiously.

"Take her at once to Europe and keep her there for six months," returned the diminutive man of drugs, sententiously. Then he went back to his office and on his books charged the Hon. John Tupper Inman twenty-five dollars for professional services rendered.

"Would you like to go over to the other side, Alice?" asked Mr. Inman at supper. She never stood when she could sit. Since he had learned from his only visit to Europe he had familiarly called the European world "the other side." Her pale face flushed. She looked at her aunt in momentary surprise. Then, with the keenness that she had inherited from her father of his wife, she answered:

"Yes, I would."

"What am I going to do?" cried Miss Inman in consternation.

"Keep house 'til we return," remarked her brother sternly.

A few moments later the great man had departed for his club. His sister had retired to her room in tears. Alice Inman sat alone in the library trying to read. Her mind was in a whirl. The book in her lap seemed to have no power to hold her attention. Suddenly a servant appeared at the doorway. She handed a card to her mistress. It bore the name of

JOHN ARNOLD.

"Show him into the parlor," said Alice, throwing down her book.

CHAPTER V.

Platonic friendship, a clever young American has remarked, is possible only between husband and wife. This is undoubtedly witty, but, like so many epigrams, is not strictly true. John Arnold and Alice Inman, for example, had tacitly agreed to eliminate sentiment from their intercourse and meet each other on the basis of mental affinity. It is true that John Arnold had fallen in love with Alice, but he was not too egotistic to see clearly that his passion was hopeless. He had determined, therefore, to cherish what he had won, her friendship, and not risk that precious possession by a useless avowal that might jeopardize their intimacy.

Arnold was not generally popular with women. As has been said, he was far from handsome and his conversational powers were not brilliant. Nevertheless, there was in his manner a manly self-poise, a suggestion of reserved strength, that appealed to Alice Inman.

She was truly glad to see him to-night and smiled cordially as she gave him her hand.

"You have been working hard," she remarked, as he drew a chair toward her. "You look tired."

"Yes," he answered, "I fear I am very dull. I am obliged to study twice as long as most men to accomplish the same results. My chum can guess nearer right than I can learn."

This reference to Harlin Otis was unfortunate. Arnold noticed that Alice's hands twitched nervously and a rather awkward silence ensued.

"Perhaps in the long run," she said at length, "it is better to possess your mental temperament than the other. What came hard to me in school I remember better now than studies that took but little effort on my part."

"I can readily understand that. There is, indeed, a law of compensation. Nature, not having provided me with quick perceptions, kindly substituted a strong memory. Perhaps I should not complain."

"Why should you? You stand very near the head of your class. I fear you underrate your mental powers."

Arnold seldom smiled cynically, but in this instance a sarcastic expression crossed his face.

"And the stupidest man in our class is at its head. I don't believe, Miss Inman, that a man's rank in college counts for much as a prophetic indication of his success or failure in after life. Last year's valedictorian is now teaching school on $800 a year. The man who stood third from the foot in the same class has made more than $10,000 in Wall street since he was graduated."

"And is money-getting, then, the aim and end of education?"

"Perhaps not," he answered, "but the world to-day gauges success by dollars and cents. It is a crime to be poor."

He spoke bitterly. If he had been better provided with this world's goods he felt that he might have had less hesitation in confessing to the heiress before him his love for her. But he had his way to make, his fortune to earn and this fact, combined with reasons mentioned heretofore, kept him silent.

"I should not like to believe what you say," she said musingly, "but it may be true. If it is it takes all the romance out of life. Don't you think so?"

"Not at all. Monte Cristo was a romantic figure, but there are countless men in this country who are ten times as rich as was Dumas' hero. Is there no romance in owning eight or ten railroads, a few gold and silver mines, two or three palaces and a steam yacht? No, don't believe that all the poetry of life has departed because of the modern greed for wealth. To my mind, the richer the few become and the poorer the many, the more striking will be the contrasts in our civilization. Romance is founded on contrast. It is for that reason that writers of fiction in the countries where caste is recognized have always possessed an advantage over our own authors. Now that we, have a moneyed aristocracy, or, rather, a timocracy, a great opportunity is presented to some American Balzac who can grasp the salient features of the New World's comedie humaine."

"You have thrown a new light on the subject," remarked Alice, rather absently. Was she thinking of the youth who possessed the faculty of "guessing" right? "Perhaps you will some day essay the role yourself."

"What role?"

"That of the American Balzac."

Arnold laughed aloud.

"No," he said, "I shall never be a novelist—nor a poet."

His remark was rather unkind and Alice flushed slightly as he uttered the last word. For, be it known, Harlan Otis had already proved himself a versifier of much promise. The venerable Professor of English had asserted in public that Otis, if he lived, would some day find a high place in the realm of American letters. He had already had a number of poems published in the Atlantic and Harper's and had been nick-named "Lord Byron" by the jealous Rogers.

"I have a piece of news for you," remarked Alice, changing the topic abruptly. "I am going to Europe."

A look of mingled astonishment and pain came into John Arnold's face.

"When?" He managed to ask.

"I don't know. Right away, I suppose. When papa makes up his mind to do a thing he generally does it in a hurry."

"How long will you be gone?" Arnold was rubbing his hands together in a restless way.

"Again, I don't know. Perhaps six weeks; perhaps a year."

"And you want to go?"

Alice looked him squarely in the eyes, though her face had grown slightly paler than its wont.

"Yes."

There was silence for some time. Youth is always hopeful, and although Arnold had determined to maintain his intimacy with Alice upon a purely Platonic basis, still at the bottom of his heart he had clung to the vague hope that some day circumstances would favor his suit.

"I am very selfish, I suppose, to wish you were not going. Sorry that——or that I want to go?" It is hard to find a woman who has not something of coquette in her make-up. Perhaps it was that relief to Alice's over-burdened heart, to tease this man a little.

"For both," he answered, rising to go. He wished to be alone. He felt that he could no longer remain seated in her presence and when he found himself outside, the darkness of the night was grateful to his agitated soul.

"I am a fool—a fool," he muttered, as he hurried on toward college. "I, who pride myself on my self-control, have allowed

Reflections on the Moon.

Though the moon is our nearest neighbor it is the one planet mostly ignored by astronomers. Some old sayingf regarding the midnight orb are as follows:

Farmers used to put a great deal of dependence in the moon. They planted crops, built worm-fence, put on shingle and clapboard roofs, killed hogs, hung meat, cut timber, chopped weeds and traded horses according to its phase.

Almost any old-time farmer will tell you that a worm-fence built in the light of the moon and ascending node will worm around and finally fall down. If you plant potatoes during similar phases they will all go to tops and the tubers will be small and watery. This is the time, however, to plant cucumbers, especially when the sign is in the arms.

The southern darkey says the dark of the moon is the best time for gathering chickens.

The carpenter of former times would not think of putting a shaved shingle roof on a building in the dark of the moon, because the shingles would curl up, pull the nails out and soon leak like a seive. Neither would he cut timber for a house, nor would he paint it until the sign was right.

Your grandmother or veteran aunt can tell you that when hogs were killed in the wrong time of the moon the slices of ham would shrivel up more than half, and flitch would all fry away, leaving only small cracklings. Apples or any ksnd of fruit dried in the wrong time of the moon were certain to mold or get woamy, and cider vinegar refuse to become sharp.

It was to the moon the farmer looked for indications of the weather. If the new moon lay well on its back it was a sign of dry weather, but if it tipped up to such an extent that a shot pouch wouldn't hang on the lower horn you might depend upon the water pouring out.

The time of changing had a good deal to do with the weather, but there was a lack of agreement upon this point, but it was generally conceded that a change before noon, or before midnight indicated fair weather. A circle or halo around the moon was a sure sign of rain, and the number of stars visible within the circle indicated the number of days before the rain would come.

To be born in the light of the moon, the sign in the head, with ascending node, insured a large brain, exalted intelligence and a progressive spirit. If the sign was in the heart the individual would be of a generous, jovial, kindly dispositon: if in the stomach a great eater, with a tendency to grow fat and pussy; if in the legs he would be very active and a great traveler or gad-about; if in the feet a good dancer and hard kicker.

It is quite natural that the moon should have more or less influence on love affairs. There is that well known and oft-repeated couplet:

"Happy is the bride that the sun shines on,
Happy is the corpse that the rain rains on."

It is the moon however, that the maiden looks to for a charm to bring her lover. If she wishes to see him she must wait for the new moon and at first sight of it over her right shoulder kneel at her bedroom window and repeat these lines:

"New moon true moon come tell unto me,
Before this time to-morrow,
Who my true love will be.
If his clothing I do wear,
And his children I do bear.
Blithe and merry may I see him,
With his face to me.
If his clothing I don't wear,
And his children I don't bear.
Sad and sorrowful may I see him,
With his back to me."

Then she must crawl into bed quietly, compose her mind and wait for him to appear to her in a dream.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

4 Mothers, 10 Children.

These children are being brought up on Castoria. Read what the mothers say about Castoria. There is no opium, morphine or other narcotic substance in Castoria. The formula is printed on the wrapper of every bottle. It is perfectly harmless, pleasant to take and positively effective. Physicians prescribe Castoria, mothers give Castoria, and children cry for Castoria. It gives the child health and the mother rest.

"I certify that little Robbie Hale, of 466 Portland Avenue, St. Paul, was a thin, crying baby from his birth until he was given Castoria. He began to improve from the first week's trial. Has taken 13 bottles; is perfectly well; weighed 20 pounds the day he was 7 months old, and when this picture was taken. Robbie's changed condition has caused many mothers to use Castoria. It is the best thing for babies I have ever known."

Dragged Sixty Feet.

Walter W. Franklin, Esq., received a letter from Boalsburg, Centre county, Pa., Monday evening, which gave a graphic account of a thrilling runaway accident in which J. H. R. Wagner, Esq., of this city, and his wife were injured. Mrs. Wagner, who wrote the letter, made a narrow escape from a shocking death.

Mr. and Mrs. Wagner went to Boalsburg on Tuesday last, where they were the guests of Mr. Michael Hess, Mr. Wagner's cousin. On Tuesday the Lancaster visitors and Mr. and Mrs. Hess went out driving. They occupied a vehicle drawn by a pair of very spirited young horses. The animals became frightened and could not be controlled by Mr. Hess.

They ran away and dashed toward the State College at a maddening pace. It was certain death to jump from the conveyance, and the terrified ladies clung to the sides of the carriage until the big gates of the college were reached. The horses ran through the gates and the tongue of the carriage was broken off. A large splinter penetrated one of the horses legs and this caused the frenzied animal to plunge ahead in a frightful manner. The carriage was completely demolished at the gates and the occupants were thrown out. Mrs. Wagner was caught in one of the wheels and she was dragged about 60 feet. The wheel broke and she dropped to the ground unconscious. Nearly all the clothing was torn from her person. Had it not been for the breaking of the wheel Mrs. Wagner would have been dragged to death over the road. Her injuries consisted of a number of severe cuts and bruises about the face and body. Mr. Hess' leg was broken, Mrs. Hess was seriously injured, and Mr. Wagner was considerably cut and bruised.

Mr. Hess is well known here. Mrs. Wagner is a sister to Mrs Emlen Franklin. Mr. Wagner's many friends, as well as those of Mrs. Wagner, will be glad to hear that their injuries are not of a serious character.—Lancaster Examiner.

String Bean Salad.

One of our best salads for tea or dinner is that made of string beans. Wash a quart of beans; string them, but do not break them. Cook them for two hours till tender. Sprinkle them with salt and pepper and lay them aside till they become cold. Then add to a quart of beans a teaspoonful of chopped parsley, three tablespoonful of salad vinegar, the same of good oil and a little more salt and pepper. Toss the beans in this salad mixture, without breaking them, and serve them at once.

BROOKLYN, Conn., May 5, '90.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.:
Sirs:—Last Summer I cured a Curb upon my horse with your celebrated Kendall's Spavin Cure and it was the best job I ever saw done. I have a dozen empty bottles, having used it with perfect success, curing every thing I tried it on. My neighbor had a horse with a very bad Spavin that made him lame. He asked me how to cure it. I recommended Kendall's Spavin Cure. He cured the Spavin in just three weeks.
Yours respectfully,
WOLCOTT WITTER.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 4, '90.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.:
Dear Sirs:—I have been selling more of Kendall's Spavin Cure and Flint's Condition Powders than ever before. One man said to me, it was the best Powder I ever kept and the best he ever used.
Respectfully,
OTTO L. HOFFMAN.

CHITTENANGO, N. Y., May 19, '90.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.,
Dear Sirs:—I have used several bottles of your Kendall's Spavin Cure with perfect success, on a valuable and blooded mare that was quite lame with a Bone Spavin. The mare is now entirely free from lameness and shows no bunch on the joint.
Respectfully, F. H. HUTCHINS.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

MONROE, La., May 8, '90.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.,
Gents:—I think it my duty to render you my thanks for your far famed Kendall's Spavin Cure. I had a four year old filly which I prized very highly. She had a very severe swollen leg. I tried about eight different kinds of medicines which did no good. I purchased a bottle of your Kendall's Spavin Cure which cured her in four days.
I remain yours,
MARION DOWDEN.

A Crank Let Loose.

President Harrison has pardoned John T. Armes, an officer on the retired list of the United States Army. Colonel Armes is generally known as a harmless but effective crank. It was he who sold on paper and in the newspapers a suburban residence to Mr. Cleveland when he was President, and thereby got much advertising for his business.

What he was sentenced for was pulling the nose of Governor Beaver while the latter was in Washington attending the inauguration of President Harrison.

Armes, sentence was that he should not wear his uniform or go more than fifty miles from the District of Columbia. On Thursday Armes was in great shape. He did not care about the limitation of his movements but it hurt him very much to be prohibited from wearing epaulettes and his army hat. He promenaded up and down F Street in Washington in full and brand new regimentals.

The Finest Jelly from Fruit Skins.

Many good housekeepers do not know that the most delicious jelly can be made of fruit skins and cores, such as are usually thrown away. There is more gelatinous matter around the core and skin of all fruit than in any other part. The skin of peaches, with a few bits added, boiled in as little water as possible, strained and made up with sugar, pint for pound, yield a most delicious red jelly. A delightful jelly may even be made of apple skins and cores, though it is improved in flavor and jellies more easily if a small quantity of the cores and skins of quinces are added to it. A very excellent jelly is made of grape skins and quince skins in about equal quantities Pear skins contain less gelatinous matter than any other fruits, but if used in connection with quince skins will make a fair elly.—N. Y. Tribune.

Pennsylvania Is All Right.

The census bulletin showing the number of prisoners confined in the county jails of the country puts Pennsylvania decidedly at the head of the list, with 2,386; New York, the second in order having but 1,202. This apparent bad showing for Pennsylvania has no significance, however. Under our laws many prisoners are retained in the county jails who under sentence of like length in other States would be concentrated in the penitentiaries. A mere numerical exhibit of the prisoners of any sort in a State is no indication of the criminality of its people. A large showing of convicts is quite as likely to stand for a vigorous and effective administration of the law, as for an exceptionally bad population.

The Parent of Insomnia.

The parents of insomnia or wakefulness is in nine cases out of ten a dyspeptic stomach. Good digestion gives sound sleep, indigestion interferes with it. The brain and stomach sympathizes. One of the prominent symptons of a weak state of the gastric organs is a disturbance of the great nerve entrepot, the brain. Invigorate the stomach, and you restore eqvilibrium to the great centre. A most reliable medicine for the purpose is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is far preferable to mineral sedatives and powerful narcotics which, though they may for a time exert a soporific influence upon the brain, soon cease to act and invariable injure the tone of the stomach. The bitters on the contrary, restore activity to the operation of that all important organ and their beneficent influence is reflected in sound sleep and a tranquil state of the nervous system. A wholesome impetus is likewise give to the action of the liver and bowels by its use.

He Died.

On Thursday afternoon Reuben Wilkings, the would-be murderer of Mrs. John Wilson, near Philipsburg, and whoe afterwards cut his own throat, and whos dying condition was reported, breathed his last. His was a critical case, and although the hospital staff of surgeons did all in their power to prolong the man's life, yet it was evident to them from the first that death would be the result.

Up to four o'clock this afternoon no friends of the deceased had put in an appearance to claim the body, and its disposition will therefore be left with legal authorities.

—The colored citizens of Williamsport have arranged to have a big time next Saturday in celebrating the 28th anniversary of the Emancipation Proclamation. Eminent speakers will be present and a large parade will be given.

—Rev. Mr. Kline, of Allentown, Pa., will be in Bellefonte next Sunday and officiate in the Episcopal church. Also the Sunday following. Rev. Mr. Kline is an old Centre countian, having been born and raised in Bellefonte and his presence here will likely draw large congregations to that church.

—The Pennsylvania management is about to add to its rolling stock a photographer's car with all necessary appliances. The work to be done by this car will be a photgraphic survey of the country along the line of road, and while picturesque scenes will principally be taken the work will also be of such a character as to be serviceable to the engineering and road department.

COUNCIL'S DOINGS.

STREETS, ALLEYS, LIGHTS, COWS AND WATER DISCUSSED.

Council met at the usual hour with but seven members present. Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

A goodly sprinkling of citizens were present. John G. Love, Esq., was present on behalf of Mr. Wm. Steele to oppose the opening of an alley running through his premises. As there was no application for the opening of such an alley pending, there was nothing to say.

John Blanchard, Esq., was present on behalf of Principal James P. Hughes and other citizens to ask that the alley running south from the Academy, and which was shut up by mutual consent for a few years only, be re-opened and made a public thoroughfare. As the borough solicitor, Mr. Clement Dale was not thoroughly informed regarding this alley the matter was referred back to him for a thorough investigation and report to council at next meeting whether or not the alley that formerly existed there was a legal alley.

Mr. George A. Bayard was present to ask the grade for a pavement in front of Frank Blair's property on Willow Bank street.

Burgess W. F. Reeder appeared in behalf of the citizens of the North Ward to ask that a light be placed at the corner of Linn and Allegheny street. Also requested the council to take some action towards keeping the cattle from running at large on the streets of Bellefonte.

Borough Solicitor Clement Dale was present and made a statement regard to the opening of Humes street. An ordinance had been passed for the opening of this street but because of a slight techincality one of the property owners took exception and the court set aside the proceedings, putting the costs on the borough. An order for the costs, which amounted to $22-80, was ordered drawn, and a motion presented and adopted instructing the borough solicitor to go ahead and draw up another ordinance for the opening of said street; also an alley parallel with Bishop street between Logan and Willow streets east to the Lewistown pike; and that the same be presented at the next meeting of town council for adoption, and that a written legal notice given to all property owners to be present at that time.

Street committee had no especial report to make.

The water committee reported improvements made and offered suggestions for the improvement of the water supply by putting in a large stand pipe.

Fire and police committee reported numerous complaints from citizens regarding the inefficiency of the light as well as the police service at night.

Market, Nuisance and Finance committee reported progress.

In the matter of the grade on Willow bank street the street committee was authorized to establish the grade.

In the matter of the application of Mr. Reeder for a light at corner of Linn and Allegheny the same was referred to the street committee for investigation and report at the next meeting.

Mr. Reeder's request that something be done to keep the cows off the streets was next taken up. After a little discussion Mr. Gault moved that an ordinance be passed prohibiting the cows from running at large on the streets of Bellefonte. No member of the council had courage enough to second the motion and it was thus allowed to die a natural death. This ended the cow question.

Mr. Hillibish's suggestion that a new stand pipe be erected at the big reservoir was taken up and after very little discussion it was voted to authorize the water committee to erect the pipe. The cost of same will be about $200 and the benefits to be derived from it will be six-foot higher head of water and the same amount of pressure in a much quicker time.

After the approval of the usual number of bills council adjourned.

That Obstreperous Cow.

From the request presented to council on Monday evening by Burgess Reeder that some action be taken toward keeping the cows off the streets of Bellefonte it would seem that at least a small portion of our citizens have awakened to the fact that we are living in the nineteenth century and almost on the dawn of the twentieth, and that for some reason or other the scales have fallen from their eyes and they see plainly now the condition of a town where cows are allowed to roam at their own sweet will claiming the sacred precincts within the borough line as their own and only pasture field; inasmuch as the legislature has prohibited the animal from running at large on the public highway.

Mr. Reeder said he had been approached by a large number of people who urged him to make the request. When the matter came up for discussion Mr. Samuel Gualt, the owner of a cow, was the only member who had the courage to champion the cause of the cow's removal. He moved that an ordinance be passed prohibiting the cow from running at large. His motion died from want of the support of being seconded, although every member of council present proclaimed the cow a nuisance. The president even going so far as to say that they were constant menace to life and limb.

Cases were cited where timid ladies and children would not go out on the streets for their fear of cows. This is nothing new, as there are lots of such cases in town. But still the cow roams undisturbed and from present appearance will continue to go undisturbed.

Where He Earned His First Money.

Senator P. Gray Meek and wife returned on Friday evening from a tour through the west. They spent Thursday night in Pittsburg and we find the following in Saturday's Pittsburg Times:

P. Gray Meek, editor of the Bellefonte Watchman, and State Senator from the district composed of Center, Clearfield and Clinton counties, was in Pittsburg yesterday on his way home from a month's tour in the West, including the meeting of the National Editorial Association, to which he was a delegate. While eating lunch in a Fifth avenue restaurant he remarked: "We can't be very far from the spot where I earned the first money I ever earned in my life, outside of the 25 cents a day I got for dropping corn when a boy. I got restless, as many boys do, and came to the city to seek my fortune. I didn't find it immediately, and finally, walking down Fifth avenue one day, with well nigh empty pockets and stomach to correspond, I found a man exhibiting an extraordinarily big hog and a horned rooster. I got a job, for one day, to distribute circulars, setting forth the interesting charms of his exhibition. In the course of doing this I found a Hebrew clothing house that wanted a boy, and engaged for the following day, which was Saturday. They wanted me to report on Sunday, however, to clear up the store for the next day's business, and I concluded that city life was too wicked for me, and went back to the country." Senator Meek has not sought employment in the city since, but his substantial prosperity is evidence that his pious scruples haven't cost him much.

Bellefonte Personals.

David M. Lieb, principal of the Bellefonte schools, was a guest of Krom's Hotel last night and left for home this morning. Mr. Lieb is a cultured scholar and one of the most successful of teachers. Mr. Reed, proprietor of Krom's Hotel, is quite lucky in catching on to distinguished travelers, most of whom know where the good "vittles" are with which to comfort the inner man.

Ex-Governor James A. Beaver, of Bellefonte, arrived here yesterday afternoon and placed his autograph on the Krom House register in that plain, pointed and emphatic style of chirography that is peculiar to him. The distinguished gentleman left on the early B. E. V. train this morning for his home. While here he remained a close friend to his room, and his presence in our city was known by but a few.

George T. Bush, of Bellefonte, eldest son of the late lamented Daniel G. Bush, Esq., gave us a call this morning. Mr. B. is a great bicycle, and belongs to the national "meet" or association. He is also a noted football player and has a fine book and stationary and bicycle fixings store in Bellefonte. He and his brother and sister are the owners of much valuable property in that borough. George is a clever, agreeable fellow, who puts on no airs and whom it is always pleasant to meet.—L. H. Democrat.

Lock Haven Won.

On Saturday the Bellefonte ball club, accompanied by about fifty of the ball sports of the town, went to Lock Haven to do up the club at that place. The boys felt pretty confident when they departed in the morning that they would bring the pennant along home with them and a number of boxes of cigars and no little money was wagered on the game. But when they met our sister city's club on the diamond and the real work of capturing the pennant began, our boys did not seem to be in it, the score at the close of the game standing 13 to 6 in favor of Lock Haven. But then if the boys didn't win the game they had a jolly, good time and lots of fun, and were well treated by the Lock Havenites. The only bad result was a bad eye received by Pat Ryan in a collision with H. C. Quigley, Esq., while both were trying to catch a fly. The boys were laughingly received when they arrived in Bellefonte on the 5.20 train, which, by the way, was about a half hour late. Conductor Haupt said he would have liked to brought them in after night if it had been possible.

Death of an Old Soldier.

William A. Carter died at his late residence, 201 Fourth avenue, at 7 o'clock Sunday evening at the age of 62 years and 8 months. He leaves a wife and five children namely; Grant and Joseph, resident of this city; James and Mrs. Minnie Baird, residing at Scotia, and William, residing at Belsena Mills, Clearfield county. The deceased lived a greater portion of his lifetime in Centre county, removing to Altoona in March of this year. He was a soldier in the late war and lost a limb in the defense of his country. He was a member of the Wilk's Methodist church, of Fairbrook Centre county. The funeral services took place last evening at the house. The body will be taken this morning on seashore express to Fairbrook for interment.—Tribune.

Notice to Sportsmen.

For some time past local sportsmen have been killing partridges on the Thomas estate a few miles east of Bellfeonte, notwithstanding the fact that it is out of season, as well as on private lands where notices are posted forbidding the killing of birds on the premises. The owners request us to say that unless the same is stopped the guilty person or persons will get themselves in trouble as they will prosecute the first man caught in the act.

COUNTY CONVENTION.

THE REPUBLICANS MEET AND NOMINATE A JURY COMMISSIONER AND TRANSACT OTHER BUSINESS.

The Republican county convention convened in the court house this morning. Owing to the inclemency of the weather only 50 out of the 120 delegates to which the county is entitled were present. The convention was called to order promptly at 11 o'clock by county chairman J. M. Dale, who announced that the convention was open to the electing of a chairman. An organization was effected by the election of the following officers:

Permanent Chairman—Dr. George F. Harris.

Secretary—Hard P. Harris.

The following committee on resolutions was appointed—W. I. Swoope, J. T. Barton, James McMullen.

Mr. Harry Warfel, of Philipsburg, and Mr. George Hastings, of Benner township, were chosen tellers.

Mr. Samuel Aley, of Marion township, being the only candidate put in nomination for Jury Commissioner, he was nominated by acclammation.

The following Senatorial conferres to the conference to elect delegates to the Constitutional Convention were elected: Riley Pratti, of Unionville; J. C. Bathgate, of College, and H. M. Kephart, of Unionville.

John A. Aiken, of Bellefonte; John Hamilton, of State College, and Harry Warfel, of Philipsburg, were put in nomination as delegates to the State Convention. The delegates were polled and the result was the election of J. A. Aiken and Harry Warfel as delegates to the State Convention.

Mr. Wilbur F. Reeder was elected county chairman by acclammation.

The committee on resolutions then made the following report.

Resolved: The Republicans of Centre County in convention assembled hereby express their constant adherence to the great principles of the republicans party: Protection of Home Industry, of Honest money, and of a Pure Ballot.

They Endorse the present National Administration as pure, clear and business like and commend its conduct of foreign affairs as skillful, firm and dignified.

They hereby express their sense of the benefits conferred upon the industries of Pennsylvania by the McKinley tariff, and of the great extension of our commerce and the cheapening of prices which have followed the Reciprocity System inaugurated by that measure, and they extend their hearty sympathy to their brethren in Ohio in the gallant fights they are making under the leadership of Major McKinley for republican victory in that state.

W. I. SWOOPE,
J. C. BARTON,
JAS. MCMULLEN, } Com.

The Convention then adjourned.

$500.00 Prize for the Best Short Story.

We have read with much pleasure BRAINS, a semi-monthly journal for literary folk, published at Meadville, Pa., by the United Publishing Co. It is devoted to practical literary details, aims to help the writer and has such eminent contributors as Albion W. Tourgee, Julian Hawthorne and Thomas Wentworth Higginson. The publishers are offering a prize of five hundred dollars for the best short story submitted to them before December 1. They make it a requirement that all competitors be subscribers to the paper, and will forward sample copy and rules upon request.

Death of Mrs. John Derstine.

Mrs. Derstine, wife of Mr. John Derstine, of East Lamb street, died on Sunday afternoon. The deceased had been sick for some time and her death was not unexpected. She leaves a husband and seven children to mourn her death. The funeral will take place tomorrow morning.

—We hope our correspondent in the article published elsewhere entitled, "A Good suggestion," has no reference to Editorial passes. Editors only ride on passes because they are either compelled to do so or stay at home, and it would be just as impossible for them to pay over the amount of the expense of the ride in money to the poor as it would be to refuse to accept a pass. But then Editors pay for their passes in advertising.

During Commissioner's clerk Robert Hunter's absence at camp the coming week his place will be filled by his brother Dorsey Hunter.

Misses Lizzie McGee and Hattie Coffman, who have been visiting here for several weeks, departed for their home in Williamsport on Tuesday evening.

Mr. A. J. Griest, of Unionville, was in Bellefonte on Tuesday and proved beyond a doubt that his cheek was as big as his bread basket by wanting to sit in the republican convention.

Among the many strangers in attendance at the convention on Tuesday we noticed the familiar faces of John C. Henderson, Cyrus Goss, Robert Cooke, Jr., Harry Warfel, B. J. Laporte, Dr. Thomas Tobin, and a whole host of other prominent and well known Centre countians.

—July 1861, has been a remarkable month in other respects than the weather. Never before have so many people been gored to death by infuriated bulls within the short period of thirty-one days, while the swallowings of nails, pennies, jackstone, rings, thimbles and other substances not intended to find their way into human stomachs, has been unprecedented. The last feat in that line was the swallowing of a silver dollar by a young man at Findlay, Ohio, who with several companions, flipped a dollar into the air and caught it with his mouth.

—Governor Pattison has a scheme whereby he hopes to take the entire State National Guard to the World's Fair free of all expense. This will undoubedy be good news to the soldier boys, as the trip would be interesting and instructive as well as pleasant. Go in on it, Mr. Governor; there is nothing like having Pennsylvania's soldiers will represented everywhere. It will be a good advertisement and further will show other natonis that they don't want to come fooling around the old "Keystone" state.

—Twenty-three States now give to woman the right to vote in the seclection of members of school boards, and remainder of the forty-four should follow. It is a good school, in which women can learn whether they want the right of suffrage or not. It is intimated that some of the ladies who have been tramping around the polls to elect shoolsc boards of their liking are not as enthusiastic about suffrage as formerly. In this correct, ladies.

—Mr. Jonathan Tressler, who is now in his 91st year, walked into Bellefhnte from Pleasant Gap on Monday, transacted legal business and then walked back to his son's home at the Gap. Mr. Tressler lives at Linden Hall but is now visiting at his son's home this side of the mountain. A ten mile walk in a half a day for a man over 90 years of age is nothing slow in this age of short livds and tired feelings.

—Owing to the fight between Claus Spreckles and the sugar trust granulated sugar has fallen to four cents a pound in Philadelphia and there is evidence of its still coming lower. As this is the time of year when the thrifty housewife can use sugar in unlimited quantities, we urge Mr. Spreckles to continue his fight with Trust and give us sugar as low as possible.

—An Oil City merchant got mad last week at a loafer and swore violently. The man, who was too lazy to swear, prosecuted the merchant, who plead guilty to uttering ten oaths, and paid for fracturing the peace of the Commonwealth in this manner, $12.57.
